Tongariro National Park, known for its brilliant natural features, became New Zealand's first national park in 1887. The 80,000-hectare park is an ideal place to view the volcanic wonders which outstands among 13 national parks in the country.

Activities

Tongariro Alpine Crossing

The deservedly popular Tongariro Alpine Crossing features phenomenal volcanic scenery and fine views of Lake Taupō and Mt Taranaki.

Multiday Walks

Overnight hikes in the park include the four-day Northern Circuit and the six-day Round the Mountain track—one of New Zealand's Great Walks.

Nature Trails(路径)

A series of short nature trails around Tongariro's lower valleys take in the various habitats, home to fascinating and diverse native plants and animals, and are a great way to get to know the park's special places and stories. Home to the national park visitor center, Whakapapa Village is a good place to start exploring.

Waterfall-watching

Dramatic waterfalls are a Tongariro National Park specialty. See them on a number of spectacular short walks including Taranaki Falls, Waitonga Falls, Silica Rapids and Tawhai Falls.

Key Tips

● Before departing on a walk, check at the Department of Conservation Visitor Centre for up-to-date information on weather, volcanic activity and track conditions.

On the outside, 12-year-old Luna seems like your average kid. It's not until you get to know her that you learn that Luna is anything but average.

Born with a heart defect (缺陷) called dextrocardia, Luna has had three open-heart operations and continues to pursue her interests in art and fashion. But when Luna was approached by athletic shoe company Saucony to design a shoe for sale across the country, it came as quite a surprise.

"This is so incredible. I got to use my art and creativity for something new that I'd never thought I'd be able to design," Luna said. She is one of six patients from Boston Children's Hospital (BCH) who have partnered with Saucony to design their own shoe to launch the Shoes with Soul campaign.

"Rather than just a donation, we wanted to create an experience and a moment that would not only raise money, but also awareness to highlight all the amazing work that's being done at BCH," says Chris, Saucony's vice president. "Specifically, we wanted to give some of the BCH kids an opportunity to share their story and their talents with the world."

Luna's design is fashion. "On the tongue, they digitalized one of my drawings, and then on bottom it's a really bright pink color, and on the inside, the sole of the shoe is actually another drawing I did of a sunset," she said. "Thinking about kids everywhere around the world wearing my shoe is amazing. It blows my mind."

The income from the shoe sales will benefit the Boston Children's Hospital Cardiac Fitness Program, which encourages kids to "find your possible" through personalized exercise programs tailored for each individual patient's heart condition.

"It feels really good to help people and it's really something I can relate to," says Luna. "The advice I would give a kid or someone like me is never give up. There are a lot of kids out there with your condition and you're not alone."

24. What can we learn from Chris' words?

A. It's unwise to raise money.

B. It's optional to seek donations.

C. It's wonderful to study art.

D. It's necessary to show kids' talents.

25. What does Luna mean by "It blows my mind" in paragraph 5?

A. I'm overjoyed. B. I'm very serious.

C. My mind goes blank. D. My mind is racing.

26. Which of the following best describes Luna?

A. Gifted and determined. B. Generous and serious.

C. Grateful and helpful. D. Creative and sensitive.

27. What is the text mainly intended to do?

A. Tell us a story of a disabled girl.

B. Set a good example to the disabled.

C. Launch Saucony's new brand shoes.

D. Introduce a campaign with kid patients.

The Assassin's Creed series has been about building immersive (沉浸式的) and accurate historical worlds. As their newest game releases, Assassins Creed Origins, they have also released their Discovery Tours. These tours give players a chance to walk the streets of ancient Egypt, explore Alexandria and the pyramids, and learn about wildlife and geography. For students, experiencing the ancient world in this interactive way can be more interesting and effective than just reading a textbook or watching a documentary about what they are studying.

Assassins Creed is not the only game series that can be educational either. What is important about the role of historical games is the level of choice. When watching a film, students are passive receivers of content. However, when playing a game students have an active role to play in history. A focus on choice and consequence is an important element of teaching and understanding history, so historical games can be a valuable teaching tool even if they aren't completely historically accurate. They have the power to immerse students in far away worlds and allow them to think critically about cause and consequence, think about why historical events unfolded the way they did, and even think about possible alternative outcomes. All of these are critical for historical thinking processes. No longer do students need to rely only on reading textbooks or on instructors for knowledge.

When carrying this out in your class, remember that not all students enjoy playing video games, but they can still be a valuable learning tool. The instructor also needs to be an active facilitator and taking note of teachable moments. A video game is not going to teach a class; it requires an awesome instructor to make everything come together. With the power of video games, ancient worlds no longer need to be limited to the pages of a textbook.

28. What does the underlined phrase "this interactive way" in paragraph 1 refer to?

A. Walking an ancient street. B. Playing a new game.

C. Reading a textbook. D. Watching a documentary.

29. What does paragraph 2 mainly tell us about Assassins Creed?

A. Why it is different from the film. B. Why it gains popularity.

C. How it benefits teaching. D. How it came into being.

30. Who plays a core role in game-aided teaching?

A. The teachers. B. The players.

C. The designers. D. The audiences.

31. What's the key message of this text?

A. A vivid description of ancient architecture.

B. An account of a new history learning method.

C. A detailed explanation of a social problem.

D. An online advertisement of a stylish trend.

The idea that having narrow local focus leaves little room for anything but a selfish mindset is a misconception, according to a new study that found that concern for local affairs could help with global environmental conservation.

You might have heard of NIMBY which means "not in my back yard" and describes an individual or group opposed to a new addition to the neighborhood, typically a factory, roadway or power station. Nimbyism and parochialism(眼界狭小), which is a focus on a local area, can go hand in hand, and there are concerns that parochialism paves the way for prejudice, narrow-mindedness, and selfishness.

But researchers found the exact opposite to be true in a new study published. The researchers argue that positive parochialism can inspire a larger awareness of global environmental problems and encourage people to action.

"We did not find evidence that parochialism was necessarily negative and inward-looking," said Patrick, a researcher for the study. "It can be those things, but there's no necessary conflict between feeling connected to your local area and feeling connected to the wider world."

For the study, the researchers reviewed documents from the 1987 Parish Maps project. The researchers showed how the Parish Maps project also demonstrated a passion for the environment and conservation. The researchers say that the Parish Maps project is a strong example of "positive parochialism", and shows that thinking locally can influence a global mindset.

"For a long time, it has been generally agreed that if we want people to think about global affairs they need an international worldview—but this may not be the case," said Patrick. "Given where we are now in terms of trying to encourage people to make changes to help the environment, 'positive parochialism' offers something that has been overlooked."

32. Which behavior can best illustrate NIMBY?

A. Criticizing a friend for his selfish action.

B. Accepting a proposal beneficial to locals.

C. Supporting a neighborhood construction plan.

D. Objecting to building an airport in the neighborhood.

33. Why does the author mention the Parish Maps project?

A. To explain how to protect the environment.

B. To offer an example of positive parochialism.

C. To encourage people to take part in the project.

D. To stress the importance of global mindset.

34. How does Patrick feel about "positive parochialism" phenomenon?

A. Appreciative. B. Cautious. C. Negative. D. Puzzled.

35. What may be the best title for the text?

A. Parochialism, a better practice?

B. International view, more popular?

C. Thinking locally, acting globally

D. Bigger thinking, better environment

第二节(共 5 小题;每小题 2.5 分,满分 12.5 分)

阅读下面短文,从短文后的选项中选出可以填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

You can run pretty much anywhere, with pretty much no equipment. So it must be easy to start—just put one foot in front of the other, right?

Not quite.

Starting a new training program, like most things, is stepping into unfamiliar area. __36__. Most people start out too hard, which leads to unnecessary tiredness and possible injury; or they just burn out, feeling that the last thing they want to do is go out for another heavy, painful run. Getting past that early period is the key to both running's benefits and pleasures.

__37__. You may want to start running to make your heart stronger, to up your endurance for other sports, or even just to fit into your tux(晚礼服) again. Those are all worthy goals and setting them is a valuable aid to getting where you want to go.

If you like a challenge, your goal might be running the local 5K, or something more ambitious, like finishing a Tough Mudder obstacle run or qualifying for the Boston Marathon. A typical beginner who trains properly—without overdoing it—can safely finish a 5K after about three months. __38__.

Whatever you decide to aim for, committing to it will help your progress greatly. __39__. While a short, easy run a few times a week is better than nothing, it's not nearly as exciting as looking up at—then reaching—the next level.

Then don't get ahead of yourself. __40__. And gradually you can become a good run beginner.

A. Figure out why you're running.

B. The new training program will pay off.

C. And it is possible for a marathon after a year.

D. Otherwise you tend to make no further progress.

E. That is a remarkable achievement for a run beginner.

F. You should resist the urge to run too hard, too much, or too often.

G. You're eager but unsure, excited but potentially easy to make errors.

An Autumn Outing to the Red Leaf Valley

第二节(满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料,根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段,使之构成一篇完整的短文。

An honest mistake

Karie double-checked the words on her spelling test. If she got 100 percent today, she'd win her class' First-Quarter Spelling Challenge and a brand new dictionary. Plus, Ms. McCormack had promised to do a handstand if anyone got a perfect score.

Three more words to go. N-i-c-e-l-y. Q-u-i-c-k-l-y. H-o-n-e-s-t-y. Wait! She'd spelled honesty, not honestly. She hurriedly erased the t-y and wrote l-y before handing in her paper.

Ms. McCormack graded the test papers at the break. Meanwhile, Karie sat restlessly in her seat with her fingers crossed. Then, Ms. McCormack walked to the front of the room and cleared her throat. As if she were an Olympic gymnast, Ms. McCormack's feet flipped(空翻) into the air.

"Congratulations, Karie! You did it!" she announced while upside down.

The whole class burst into applause! Ms. McCormack righted herself and presented Karie with her prize. Karie grinned as she read the label on the box:

To Karie Carter, for her perfect first-quarter score in spelling.

"Everything OK?" Mom asked as Karie burst through the front door after school. Karie didn't answer. As if by magic, she took out her spelling test paper and prize and showed them to her mother. Mom hugged her, asking her to put the test paper on the fridge so that Dad could see it when he got home.

Karie took another look at the test paper before putting it on the fridge. Her hands stopped in the mid air. She just couldn't believe her own eyes. Honesly?

YES! H-O-N-E-S-L-Y!

Mom sensed something unusual and asked why. Karie stuffed the test paper into her backpack and explained that she was just too excited. Mom brought her some tea. Yes, a "t" was exactly what she needed.

After drinking a little, Karie plodded(重步走) down the hall, lost in thought. How could she tell the class she hadn't earned the prize after all? That Ms. McCormack did the handstand for nothing?

注意:

1. 续写词数应为 150 左右;
2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

Later Dad came in with excitement.

The next morning, Karie went to school earlier than usual.
