第二部分 阅读理解 (共两节，满分 35 分)

第一节 (共 10 小题：每小题 2.5 分，满分 25 分)

阅读下列短文，从每题所给的 A、B.C 和 D 四个选项中，选出最佳选项。

A

In the 1940s,Josephine Baker, who was a big part of the new jazz style and culture and had a diverse group of fans,was one of the most famous women in France.The French people adored her as much as she loved France.So when World War II threw France into great danger,she decided to do whatever she could to help the nation that had given her so much.

In 1940,when armed German troops marched into Paris, some French people founded a secret alliance(同盟) , known as the French Resistance.The group worked for the defense of France by assisting the European and American armies in the fight against the Germans.

As a member of the Resistance, Baker applied herself devotedly to the cause.The tasks she took up proved to be valuable. She collected coded messages written on her sheets of music and then relayed them to other members.At the same time, taking advantage of her fame, Baker provided shelter and goods for the Resistance members.It would have been dangerous if the Germans had found them.

Baker's final task was critical. She made it her mission to entertain German politicians and army members,whom she lured(引诱) in with her promises of a good show.While pleasing them with her singing and dancing, Baker, equipped with a small notebook at these concerts,listened for and wrote down details about the war. She then sorted the details and turned in reports to the Resistance.

Some thought Baker's fame would be a problem. The Germans knew who she was, but they didn't think she was smart enough to work for the Resistance. So she could get information from the Germans easily, which helped the Resistance and the French army save lives and win the war. Baker had a big influence on the Resistance's work. When she died, the army and the French people held a special ceremony to honor her contribution.

21. What happened when the Germans entered Paris?

- A. They sent messages in secret code.
- B. The French Resistance was set up.
- C. Armed French soldiers defeated them.
- D. They were attracted by Baker's music.

22. What was an important task for Baker?

- A. Entertaining many fans.
- B. Providing shelter for the homeless.
- C. Writing messages in code.
- D. Giving reports to the Resistance.

23. From paragraph 5, we can conclude that

- A. her secret was discovered
- B. her fame caused a big trouble
- C. her work was recognized
- D. her music won many awards

B

OAKLAND, Calif.-Facebook said on Thursday that it would allow many employees to work from home permanently.

Mark Zuckerberg, Facebook's chief executive, told workers during a meeting that within a decade as many as half of the company's more than 48,000 employees would work from home.

"It's clear that the coronavirus has changed a lot about our lives, and that certainly includes the way that most of us work," Mr. Zuckerberg said. "Coming out of this period, I expect that remote work is going to be a growing trend as well."

Facebook's decision, the first among tech's biggest companies, is an obvious change for a business culture built around getting workers into large offices and keeping them there. Using free shuttle buses, free cafeterias and personal services like dry cleaning, tech companies have done as much as possible over the years to give employees little reason to go home, let alone avoid the office. If other large companies follow suit(仿效), tech employment could start to move from expensive centers like Silicon Valley, Seattle and New York.

Tech executives have believed that person-to-person communication was a big part of the creativity that went into making popular products. Mr. Zuckerberg long worried that employees who worked remotely would lose productivity.

In March, the coronavirus lockdown( 封锁 ) forced companies to send employees home. Many tech companies, including Facebook, emptied their offices. Now, more than two months later, executives are discovering that their remote workers performed better than expected.

Mr. Zuckerberg said the change could offer more benefits than inconveniences for the company. Allowing remote work will allow Facebook to attract valuable employees, reduce the climate influence caused by commutes(上下班) and expand the diversity of its work force, he said.

24. According to Zuckerberg, which of the following statements is NOT true?

- A. Half of Facebook's employees have been working from home.
- B. The coronavirus is one of the factors leading to remote work.
- C. Employees' work performance at home is beyond his expectation.
- D. There are more benefits of remote work than inconveniences caused by the change.

25. What can be inferred from paragraph 4 and 5?

- A. Facebook's decision has influenced other companies.
- B. Tech companies offer different services to attract valuable employees.
- C. Remote work will lower tech companies' cost.
- D. It is believed that person-to-person communication helps lead to creativity.

26. Where is the text most probably from?

- A. A newspaper.
- B. A guide book.
- C. An entertainment magazine.
- D. An advertisement.

C

A table-waiting robot cat built by a Chinese technology firm can carry plates of food, navigate a restaurant, miaow at diners and even react to having its ears stroked(抚摸) 。

Making its debut at the 2020 Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas, the so-called BellaBot was built for Chinese restaurants lacking enough waiters.

It is the brainchild of the Chinese robotics and artificial intelligence firm PuduTech. It features four shelves in the centre of its tower-like body to carry plates. Having been loaded up with meals by its human colleagues, the cat-themed robotic waiter miaows when it delivers food to diners to encourage them to take their plates. If customers thank BellaBot by stroking its ears, it will respond with a look of pleasure on its on-board screen, which displays animations of a cat's face. "The owner's hand is so warm," BellaBot has been programmed to respond.

However, much like a real cat, the robot's reaction soon changes if it is petted for too long. "It gets mad to remind you not to interrupt its job," the designers introduced. The BellaBot waiter robot is a more personality-rich update to PuduTech's previous model, which featured a more utilitarian(实用主义的) design and user interface.

Both BellaBot and its predecessor were designed with a particular mind to Chinese restaurants which are often short of waiting staff.

In a real-world food-service setting, however, BellaBot may find it difficult to operate at peak times. Nevertheless, restaurants are expected to increase their reliance on automation whether in the form of robotic waiting staff or otherwise. Furthermore, improvements in technology will see consumer robot designs grow steadily better at communicating with humans and facing new activities.

27. The underlined word debut in the second paragraph probably means

- A. first production
- B. first sale
- C. first appearance
- D. first design

28. The robot cat is able to do the following except

- A. load plates by itself and deliver food to diners
- B. help diners find seats in a restaurant
- C. react to diners with its ears stroked
- D. remind diners not to pet it for too long

29. The text is mainly written to

- A. make an advertisement
- B. introduce an updated invention
- C. predict future robot designs
- D. solve the problems Chinese restaurants are facing

30. What can be the best title for the text?

- A. Chinese robotics and artificial intelligence
- B. A Chinese technology firm
- C. Improvements in robot design
- D. Table-waiting robot cat

Every family needs routines(常规) . 31 Children do best when routines are regular, predictable,and consistent.Here are some tips from the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP).

Weekday Mornings

To make the household function well in the morning, everyone needs to know what has to be done to get ready for the day. 32 Keep wake-up routines cheerful and positive.

Evenings

Dinner should be an important time for your family.33 During dinner the family can share the day's activities and participate in enjoyable conversation. Everyone should be encouraged to take part, and negative comments and criticism should be discouraged.

Bedtime

On school nights,children need a regular time to go to sleep. Lights can go out at different times for different children in the family, depending on how much sleep each child needs. Nighttime routines can help ease a child to sleep. 34 Try to avoid exciting play and activities before bedtime.

Weekends

Weekends are good times for family togetherness.You might go grocery shopping as a family, visit museums and zoos,do chores that everyone participates in, or go on hikes or bike rides 35 Keep in mind that, although family time is essential, it is equally important for parents to set aside some time just for themselves,too.

- A. Put as many things in order as possible the night before.
- B.They help to organize life and keep it from falling into confusion.
- C.Doing the same thing at the same time every day causes boredom.
- D.These can include storytelling,reading aloud, conversation,and songs.
- E.Children can also be allowed a later bedtime than during the weekdays.
- F.Some parents have their children return each afternoon to an empty home.
- G.All family members should eat together without the distraction(分心) of television or radio.

第二节 读后续写（满分 25 分）

阅读下面短文，根据所给情节进行续写，使之构成一个完整的故事。

They say a cat has nine lives, and I believe that since I am now living my third life and I'm not even a cat. My first life began in 1904 when I was born into a farming family. Though struggling to make a living. I started my own family. This was when I began to enjoy my first life: happy, in excellent health, two lovely girls, a good job and a beautiful home. Life was a pleasant dream. Then it ended. I became affected with a disease, affecting first my right arm and leg, and then my other side. Thus began my second life...

Despite my disease I still drove to and from work each day with the aid of special equipment in my car. There were 14 steps in our home leading up from the garage to the kitchen door, which were my yardstick(标准), my challenge to continue living. When one day I was unable to lift one foot up one step and then drag the other painfully after it, I could then admit failure and lie down to die. So I kept on working and climbing those steps. You might think that here walked a man of courage and strength. Not so. Here hobbled(跛行) a bitterly discouraged man who held on to everything—clear mind, wife, job, and home—because of the 14 miserable steps. As I became older, I became more discouraged.

Then on a dark stormy night in August, I began my third life. Strong winds and heavy rain beat down on the car as I drove slowly down one of the less-traveled roads. Suddenly I heard the bang of a burst. I fought the car to stop and sat there with the seriousness of the situation and my bumping heart. It was impossible for me to change that tire. Completely impossible. Then I remembered that a short distance up a little side road was a house. I started the engine and drove slowly along until I came to the dirt road, where I turned in thankfully. Lighted windows welcomed me to the house and I pulled into the driveway and pressed the horn.
