B

A couple of weeks ago, my grandfather was explaining his favorite expression, “Nothing is ever easy.” The following day, as I tried to complete my day’s work, I happened to notice a bumble-bee on the skylight(天窗). The skylight was particularly high up, but I thought removing the bee would take no more than five minutes. An hour later, the bee still remained. All that had changed was that the living room was a mess and that I was dizzy from looking up into the sunlight. I did not expect to waste an hour on an insect so tiny, but by doing so, I understood what my grandfather meant.

It is not only time that we tend to underestimate we don’t account for unexpected costs. We often imagine what can work in our favor, but we seldom think of all the negative things that could affect us. However, it is important to remember that your day or week or year might not go as planned, and that is completely normal. It is perfectly acceptable to feel challenged even at a task you thought was simple because that is part of life.

If you can accept that nothing will ever be easy, then life might seem slightly more manageable. In middle school, I thought high school might be easier because I could choose the classes I wanted to take. In high school, I thought college might be easier because I could have a schedule best suited for myself. Yet each time, I was both wrong and disappointed. After accepting that school wouldn't be easy, I found myself with a more positive attitude and improved results.

Of course, there should be preparations made to account for expenses or time. Doing so can only help you accomplish your goals in a better way. However, there is no need to beat ourselves up(过分自责)when something stands in our path. Maybe we cannot see a bee coming our way, but we can always give ourselves the extra time to catch it.

24. What is the function of his experience of removing a bee in the first paragraph?

- A. To show the unexpected costs it caused.
- B. To lead us to what the author learned from of it.
- C. To share his story with a bumble-bee with us.
- D. To tell us how easy it is to waste our time.

25. Why do things often turn out to be different from what we expect?

- A. Unexpected things can happen.
- B. We tend not to have enough money.
- C. We often don't take time seriously.
- D. It is easy to feel challenged.

26. What can we learn from the passage?

A. The author didn't remove the bee at first because it would take him an hour or so.

- B. He accepted that school wouldn't be easy after he had a positive attitude.
- C. He mentioned the "bee" in the end to link back to the beginning.
- D. He found what his grandpa said was totally wrong at last.

27. What is the author's purpose of writing this article?

- A. To encourage people to make greater efforts.
- B. To persuade us not to expect things to be easy.
- C. To tell us what to do when something gets in our way.
- D. To explain how to make preparations.

C

As the coronavirus (冠状病毒) outbreak continues, many Americans are fearful of using public transportation. They are also looking for ways to get exercise without going to a gym. So, it may not be surprising that the pandemic (疫情) has led to a major increase in bicycle sales.

In the US, bicycles at big stores have sold out. And small bicycle stores cannot keep up with demand for “family-style” bicycles: the low-cost, easy-to-ride models. “The bicycle industry is seeing its biggest sales increase since the oil crisis of the 1970s,” said Jay Townley, an industry expert. He compared the sale of bicycles to the rush to buy products like toilet paper at the start of the pandemic.

The rise in bicycle sales is not happening just in the US. Italy has created bicycle paths for the growing number of people who want to avoid public transportation. In London, city officials plan to ban cars from some central roads. Bike shop owners in Manila say demand is even stronger than what they see at Christmas time.

Of course, you can only buy a bicycle if you can find one. In the US, the shortages now mean it may take many months to get a bicycle. High demand is not the only reason for the shortage. Many bicycle factories were shut down to stop the spread of COVID-19. The increase in bicycle demand began in March as countries began to close down. In April, the sale of bicycles increased 200 percent in the US.

Joe Minutolo is the co-owner of Bar Harbor Bicycle Shop in Maine. He said he hoped the increased sales meant a change in the way people think about transportation. “People are having a chance to rethink things,” he said, “Maybe we’ll all learn something out of this, and something really good will happen.”

28. The reason for the sharp increase of bicycle sales is ____.

- A. The outbreak of the coronavirus.
- B. People’s preference for doing exercise.
- C. The shortage of public transportation.
- D. The government’s ban on cars in the city.

29. What is the meaning of the underlined phrase “shut down” in paragraph 4 ?

A. supported B. banned C. closed D. opened

30. What is the main idea of the passage?

A. Bicycles are in great demand in some countries because of the breakout of coronavirus.

B. Government banned the producing of bicycles to prevent the spread of the virus.

C. Public transportation will take the place of private cars in the future.

D. The increased sales in bicycles will change the way people think about transportation.

31. What is Joe Minutolo’s attitude towards the increased sales of bicycles.

A. critical B. optimistic C. uncertain D. doubtful

D

In ancient times, our ancestors relied on stars to guide them on a clear night. Today, we have navigational systems to help us find our way, with the latest being the Beidou Navigation Satellite System(BDS).

The BDS is entirely built by Chinese engineers. With the launch of the last satellite from the Xichang Satellite Launch Center on June 23, the global network of 59 satellites has been completed. On July 31, Beidou started providing full-scale global services. It’s difficult to imagine the great impact those satellites, orbiting the Earth, have on our daily lives.

When you unlock one of Hellobike’s bicycles, you are using the BDS. The popular bike, sharing company came out with two new bike models this year that are equipped with the positioning service. “The intelligent lock on each bike receives Beidou satellite signals and sends positioning information to the data center, which will help collect big data on the bikes and estimate users’ riding demands in advance according to the data.” Chu Yiqun, a manager of Hellobike told Xinhua News Agency.

However, the BDS doesn’t just work one way. Along with the United States’ GPS, Russia’s GLONASS and the European Union’s Galileo, Beidou adopts a unique two-way communication system, including its ability to receive messages sent by people from areas with poor communication signals. Obviously, this exclusive function isn’t designed for users to chat online. Instead, it plays a role when disasters occur and communications are blocked.

After the Wenchuan earthquake in 2008, all ground-based communication facilities were interrupted. Though the first generation of Beidou could only send 120 characters in a single message at that time, communication between affected areas and rescue centers was successful. Now, Beidou's messaging capacity has been increased to 1200 Chinese characters in a single message. It is widely used in disaster alarms, automatic identification and information release.

As Sun Jiadong, former chief designer of the BDS said: "The application of Beidou is only limited by imagination."

32. What can we learn about the BDS from the passage?

- A. It was co-developed by Chinese and American engineers.
- B. It's able to provide global coverage for navigation.
- C. Its last satellite was launched on July 31.
- D. It works better when the weather is good.

33. Why does the author mention Hellobike in paragraph 3?

- A. To highlight the high positioning accuracy of the BDS.
- B. To present the benefits and limitations of the BDS.
- C. To show how the BDS makes people's daily lives easier.
- D. To explain how the BDS works.

34. What is the function of Beidou's two-way communication system?

- A. To help people when communication signals are weak.
- B. To make communication more fun.
- C. To allow users to chat online more freely.
- D. To collect feedback from users.

35. What does Sun Jiadong imply in the last paragraph?

- A. Beidou may be more helpful than we know.
- B. Beidou stimulates users' imagination.
- C. Beidou needs to be further perfected.
- D. Beidou is limited in application.

第二节 (共 5 小题; 每小题 2.5 分, 满分 12.5 分)

根据短文内容, 从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

You put a great deal of effort into reaching the college of your dreams. It's time to get started. But what's next? The beginning of college life can be an exciting but awkward time. Follow these tips to adapt to your new life rapidly and make the most of your college experience.

● To save time and money, use the college's bus system. Taking the bus to school is quick, easy and free in most college towns. You won't have to locate or afford a place to park either. 36 .

● 37 You might not even need all of the recommended books. New textbooks cost an arm and a leg. Try buying used textbooks — it's a good way to save money and serves the purpose as well.

● Do never look at college life as endless parties and social activities. There is a whole lot more to college if you're serious about graduating. 38 .

● 39 If the dorm doesn't suit you, consider living at home with your family or renting your own apartment. The best location for your studies isn't always your dorm. Find a quiet area, like the library, to do your work. Alternatively, buy some headphones that block out noise.

● Be mindful of your diet. Make healthy food choices and watch what you eat. Avoid foods that are processed or high in sugar. The “freshman 15” is real. Many college students gain at least 15 pounds during their freshmen year.

● While electives (选修课) can be helpful when figuring out your major, you shouldn't entirely rely on them. 40 Get involved. Make sure, though, that you still have time to study. Having too much on your plate can hurt your grades.

A. Clubs and other organizations exist around.

B. Having a good college experience is all about balancing work and fun.

C. It's also a good way to be environmentally aware.

- D. Save pennies on books by waiting until class starts.
- E. Don't take part in too many after-class activities.
- F. Be aware that your living environment can largely affect your studies.
- G. Take relaxed attitudes to your diet.

I would like to apply for the position of a part-time waiter as advertised in the newspaper.

第二节(满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料, 根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段, 使之构成一篇完整的短文。

On Wednesday night, it was the closing time of the mall. But there was an hour's work, at least, to get everything cleaned up. It would be 11: 00 pm before I finally got home. I hadn't even had time to have dinner. I was starving. My feet ached. My whole body was filled with tiredness. I couldn't wait to go to bed. But it would be only 6 hours before the alarm went off at 5: 00 am for my day job.

Things had been tight for over a year now. My husband Paul's business had taken a huge hit. I have a full-time job at a day care center and somehow do my homework for my college class too. Then I had to work nights at the mall. Without me taking my second job, there wouldn't be enough money to pay the bills. Let alone buy any Christmas presents for our 15-year-old daughter, Marie. No one wanted to wake up on Christmas morning to an empty tree.

I barely even saw Paul and Marie anymore. Marie was growing up, but a teenage girl still needs her mom. I worried about her, about us. Was she eating enough? Keeping up with her schoolwork? I wasn't afraid of sacrifices. Everyone was having to work hard for the family. I knew I was blessed to have two jobs, when millions of people couldn't find one.

How I hoped to quit my job at the day care center and obtain a full-time degree. I'd dropped down to one class a term. If I quit that, there was no way I'd find the willpower to try again. Besides, wasn't I always telling Marie to keep hoping and never give up?

My mind went back to the conversation I'd had with Marie earlier. Paul had dropped her off at the mall, where she was getting picked up for a babysitting job. "Remember we're going Christmas shopping this night, "she said. "Now I'll even have my own money. See you later."

The floor was nearly done. The boss asked me to leave.

注意:

1. 所续写短文的词数应为 150 左右;
2. 续写部分分为两段, 每段的开头语已为你写好;

Paragraph 1:

I opened the back door of the mall and saw Marie outside with a bag of food, smiling.

Paragraph 2:

I pulled her tight against me.

第一节 应用文写作

Dear Sirs/ Madams,

I would like to apply for the position of a part-time waiter as advertised in the newspaper. As the winter vacation is coming, I'm available during the week.

I hope to get a job to help me gain some social experience and enrich my life. 'm outgoing, friendly as well as helpful, which I think will help me a lot in dealing with different customers. Besides, I can play the piano and it can surely build up a warmer atmosphere.

I would be available for an interview at any time and I'm looking forward to your reply.

Yours faithfully,

Li Hua

第二节 读后续写

Paragraph 1:

I opened the back door of the mall and saw Marie outside with a bag of food, smiling. She finished her job an hour ago. She figured I didn't have time for dinner, so she bought me a bag of food with her own money earned by babysitting and waited for me outside the mall all the time. While I was eating, she told me that I was her hero and she admired everything I was doing for the family. When she was babysitting long hours or when she was tired of doing homework, she thought about my hard work. She remembered to have hope for life and never give up.

Paragraph 2:

I pulled her tight against me. Tomorrow the alarm would still ring at 5: 00 am. The bills would still be waiting. There would be more rough days ahead. And yet I was ready to face them together with Paul and Marie, all of us willing to work hard and make sacrifices and hold on to each other. Things would get better with the love of a good family.
