My favourite English novel is Pride and Prejudice, which (1.改为 whose) author is Jane Austin. In this novel, there is a girl called Lizzy and (2.加 a) rich gentleman named Mr. Darcy. At first, they don't like each other, especially Lizzy. She thinks Mr. Darcy is rather proud and had (3.改为 has) done something cruel, so she hates Mr. Darcy. Thus (4.改为 However/Nevertheless), Mr. Darcy, somehow, falls in love about (5.改为 with) her and proposes to her. To her (6.改为 his) surprise, Lizzy refuses, because she has made up her mind that she will never marry with (7.删除) a man no matter how rich he is unless she truly loves him. Later, Lizzy realizes what (8.改为 that) Mr. Darcy is very kind and not proud at all. She hates him just due to her prejudice. Maybe you can guess the end of this novel: they get marry (9.改为 married) and lead a happy life.

It's said Pride and Prejudice is the most popular English novel in the world. If you haven't read it, I strong (10.改为 strongly) recommend it to you.

A couple of days ago, I gladly received your letter, in which you asked me which major I would like to select. Actually, I have been considering this issue recently.

I will decide on English as my major. As you know, I'm always interested in foreign languages. What's more, I constantly dream about becoming an English teacher. In this way, I could teach my future students how to master this language. Hopefully, I could open the window for them to know better about this wonderful world. To realize my dream, I learn English pretty hard, because I reckon only if I myself have a good command of English will I be an outstanding English teacher.

I believe every effort will pay off. Wish me a good luck.
