I speak fluent English, that makes me very proud. One day, when we learned the new word “strange” in class, we were asked to make a sentence by it. I volunteered to do them. I said, “My classmate is a strange boy whose clothes never fit him.” Heard this, the whole class burst into laughter and my deskmate’s face turns red. After class, I was learned from my teacher that my deskmate would quit school. My words must have deep hurt him. Not until then I realize words could be powerful in both positive and negative way. We should at least avoid hurt others if our words can’t be a great encouragement to them.
