第四部分 写作 (共两节, 满分 40 分)

第一节 (满分 15 分)

One possible version:

Dear Jackson,

I'm writing to share with you my life plan in the future. When I grow up, I want to be a journalist. I think working for a newspaper and reporting news from all over the world would be really exciting. Journalists are to be very enthusiastic, independent and good at communicating with people. Hence I am trying to improve my speaking and writing skills. And of course, absorbing as much knowledge as possible at this stage in my life is what I must do.

What do you think of my life plan? Any suggestions are welcome.

Yours,

Li Hua

第二节 (满分 25 分)

One possible version:

An hour later, Chase swam to the shore, anyhow. Once on solid ground, he ran to the nearest cottage and called for help. Hearing Steven's desperate cries, people in the cottage rushed out immediately. Realizing what had happened, they sprang into action. They rushed to the bank of the river following Chase and paddled their boat instantly with rescue equipment towards the dad and daughter. Meanwhile, someone called the Rescue Department. Soon after, rescuers arrived. All of them did everything they could to carry out a thorough search.

Luckily, Steven and Abigail were found and rescued. After ensuring their safety, people breathed a sigh of relief. Steven was deeply moved and expressed his gratitude to all the rescuers with tears swirling in his eyes. Then he hugged Chase and Abigail tightly and couldn't help weeping with joy. He couldn't be prouder of his son. It was the bravery, calmness and determination of the pint-sized superhero that changed everything. It was likely to be one Memorial Day the family would never forget.

Text 1

W: I will take the subway to work tomorrow.

M: Don't you always drive to work? Is there anything wrong with your car?

W: No. My sister's car broke down. And it's inconvenient for her to go to work by subway. So she borrowed mine.

Text 2

M: It's a perfect day for sunbathing, right?

W: Yes. I'm going to the beach this afternoon. Do you want to join me?

M: I'd love to, but I've decided to sunbathe with my mother in the backyard at home.

Text 3

W: Good afternoon, sir. I'm Jennifer Jones. I'm here for the interview relating to my visa application. Here is my passport.

M: Nice to meet you. So what do you plan to do in the UK? To work for a company or study in a university?

Text 4

M: How can you jump the queue, ma'am? I've waited for almost an hour to get to the front of the line.

W: I'm sorry. But I'm really in a hurry. My train will leave in 15 minutes.

Text 5

W: Here is the fare. Please give me the receipt.

M: Here you are. Remember to take your baggage out of the trunk.

W: Thank you.

Text 6

M: Mrs. White, may I know how you will score in Psychology 101?

W: To be honest, all of your coursework is important, including everything from your attendance, your homework to all of your test results for the semester.

M: Okay. How do you total our scores?

W: Attendance is five percent; the midterm exam and the final exam are fifteen percent each; homework and quizzes are the rest. So please just do your best at all times.

M: Well, what if we are out sick?

W: Make sure you contact me in time as I only allow one unexcused absence.

Text 7

W: I was late for the morning meeting again.

M: Oh, that's terrible. When did you get up?

W: I woke up at 7:00 and got up 10 minutes later. But I had no food at home, so I had to buy breakfast with my husband. It was 8:15 when I clocked on. I was 15 minutes late today.

M: Oh my God! Your manager was really angry with you, right?

W: Yes, you're right.

M: Why did you get up so late this time?

W: The weather was the main reason. It was so cold that I couldn't get up earlier, even though the alarm I set is 7:00 every morning.

M: Yeah. Getting up in winter is really painful. But when we were in college, you were often late for class too. I don't think being late is a good habit, you know.

Text 8

W: Hi Joe!

M: Hi Angelia!

W: Come in, please. What would you like to drink, coffee or tea?

M: Just a glass of orange juice, please. Angelia, I was wondering if you would like to come to my party on Friday night.

W: Is it the day after tomorrow? I promised my mother to clean the rooms and tidy things up.

M: No, actually tomorrow is Friday.

W: Then I'm free that night, and a party sounds good.

M: Great, it'll be in my house. Do you know how to get there?

W: I've been to your house once, but I'd appreciate it if you email me your detailed address.

M: Sure, no problem. Do you have anyone that you would like to bring with you to the party?

W: I would really like to bring my cousin, Jake, if that would be okay.

M: Oh yeah. The more the merrier!

Text 9

W: There were lots of presentations for us to do this week. It was such a long week.

M: Yes! I nearly became a night owl. If I hadn't worked until midnight, I would not have finished all the work that the boss gave me.

W: We should spend some days relaxing or we'll be exhausted.

M: There's a music festival in Santa Barbara next Sunday. Maybe I'll go there next Saturday. But this weekend, I just want to have a good rest at home.

W: But spending two days at home is so boring. I want to do something more interesting. Something can refresh my body and mind.

M: So what are you going to do this weekend?

W: I was thinking of driving to the beach. Would you be interested in joining me?

M: Good idea. When will you be leaving?

W: I think we can leave around 7:00 a.m. on Saturday.

M: Well, at weekends I like to sleep late. How about picking me up at 8:00 a.m.?

W: OK. It's about a 20-minute drive from your house to the beach. We still have plenty of time to explore there.

M: Thanks for asking me to go with you. See you on Saturday.

Text 10

M: The China Foundation for Poverty Alleviation has started a program to hire and train some women as substitute mothers to look after left-behind children. The three-year program will select 100 villages across Sichuan Province and hire one woman for each village.

The “substitute mothers” will do parents’ job, figuring out what the children need and helping them with problems. Each substitute mother will take care of about 300 to 500 children.

There will be a “children’s home” in each village to be the mother’s office and children’s playing space. Their job is to provide quick service and discover the children’s problems.

The program hopes to hire women aged 19 to 55 years old from the villages. “We tend to hire full-time ‘mothers’ to make sure they can devote all their energies to the care of children,” Liu said. “We want local women because they understand local languages and cultures.” The program in Sichuan is an experiment, and Liu said, “If it is a successful model, we will start it in the whole country.”

“If parents are forced to leave home to earn a living and unable to take their children with them, we are looking for a transitional way to deal with the problem,” he added.
