

感恩遇见，相互成就，本课件资料仅供您个人参考、教学使用，严禁自行在网络传播，违者依知识产权法追究法律责任。

更多教学资源请关注
公众号：溯恩高中英语

知识产权声明

浙江省十校联盟联考

读后续写评析

浙江省衢州第一中学 徐荣仙

You'd think that after hearing Mom and Dad talk about The Trip for a year, I'd be eager to go. But I don't even want to think about it. "Aren't you excited?" asks Dad looking up from his laptop. "This is the trip of lifetime. I'll bet none of your friends will be driving across the United States this summer." Exactly, I think. Nobody I know is going to pile into an old van, and drive from California to New York and back in 58 days. Fifty-eight days! That's practically my whole summer! But I know it's useless to protest (抗议).

When Dad was offered a summer off for the first time in his career, he said that he'd always dreamed of driving across the country. So now we're going. This is Dad's chance.

I pick up my cat. Max, and bury my face in his fur. He paws at my ears playfully. Good-bye, summer vacation. Good-bye, diving at the lake. Good-bye to hanging out and doing absolutely nothing. Good-bye, Max. I'm going to miss this ball of fur. I put him down and laugh as he bats a button across the floor like a soccer player. He is interested in all small objects.

The closer The Trip gets, the harder it is to ignore. Thick envelopes arrive from places like Indiana, Tennessee, and Arkansas. Night after night, Mom and Dad huddle around the computer, plotting every inch of our 8,000-mile journey.

Three days after school gets out, The Trip is finally here. Everything is packed and ready to go. Mom says that we are supposed to leave at 9 a.m. But when Dad notices a wet spot under the van, I realize we won't be going anywhere for a while. Dad crawls under the van. Car parts spring up around the van like mushrooms.

All of my friends from the neighbourhood gather in the front yard. "So when are you leaving?" they ask. "Anytime now," I say, but inside I'm wondering how we're ever going to make it across the country when we can't even get down the driveway.

Minutes turn into hours. By the time Dad gives Mom the news, it's late afternoon. "I fixed the leak," says Dad. "But now I can't find one of the fan bolts (螺栓)." Mom organizes a search, but in vain.

Paragraph 1:

Dad calls the stores but none carry the bolt that fits this old van. _

Paragraph 2:

Then it hits me. "Max!" I shout, "Find Max!"

---

1. Analyze the passage

Main Idea:

The author's tangled emotions about a trip organized by his father

Main plots:

unwilling to accept it
uninterested in experiencing it

something unexpected happened worried about it or excited at it?

change his mind

expect to find the bolt offer a helping hand

happy

Conflicts:

unwilling

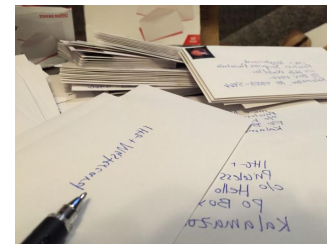

an old van; extremely long time;

It's none of my business

miss Max

thick envelopes

many friends

calm

a focus excited?

disappointed?

a chance to experience his own summer vacation?
happy?

regretful about the likely abortive trip?

leaking

HOW?

parents' devotion in advance
friends' concern about it

How did the author express his unsatisfied emotion about the plan?

extremely reluctant but helpless

time-consuming and boring

Exhausted and driving to pile into an old van, and back in 58 days. Fifty-eight days! But I know it's useless to protest.

It's none of my business!

When Dad was offered a summer off for the first time in his career, he said that he always dreamed of driving across the country. So now we're going. This is Dad's chance.

I pick up my cat, Max, and bury my face in his fur. He paws at my ears playfully. Good-bye, summer vacation. Good-bye, diving at the lake. Good-bye to hanging out and doing absolutely nothing. Good-bye, Max. I'm going to miss this ball of fur. I put him down and laugh as he bats a button across the floor like a soccer player. He is interested in all small objects.

have no choice but to accept

Ready for the trip

hard work

The closer The Trip gets, the harder it is to ignore. Thick envelopes arrive from places like Indiana, Tennessee, and Arkansas. Night after night, Mom and Dad huddle around the computer, plotting every inch of our 8,000-mile journey.

Three days after school gets out, The Trip is finally here. Everything is packed and ready to go. Mom says that we are supposed to leave at 9 a.m. But when Dad notices a wet spot under the van, I realize we won't be going anywhere for a while. Dad crawls under the van. Car parts spring up around the van like mushrooms.

All of my friends from the neighbourhood gather in the front yard. "So when are you leaving?" they ask. I say, but inside I'm wondering how we're ever going to cross the country when we can't even get down the driveway.

Minutes turn into hours. By the time Dad gives up on the news, it's late afternoon. "I fixed the leak," says Dad. But now I can't find one of the fan bolts (螺栓)." Mom organizes a search, but in vain.

One conflict

in a dilemma

Another conflict

2. Read for the possible plots

Paragraph 1:

Dad calls the stores but none carry the bolt that fits this old van. _____

- Did the author help them search for the missing bolt?
- Will the trip be delayed or canceled?
- How did the author feel about the unexpected result?

Paragraph 2:

Then it hits me. “Max!” I shout, “Find Max!”

- How did they search for Max?
- Where was Max? And was the bolt found?
- How did the author feel after finding the bolt?

下水作文：

Dad called the stores but none carried the bolt that fit this old van.

The bolt was gone magically. Father leaned against the van with his face and hands black with grease. He shrugged his shoulder and forced a smile, “The trip would be a bubble!” Contrary to what I had expected, something soft inside touched me. Their busy figures and hopeful expressions appeared before my eyes constantly, which drove me to move towards him. “Maybe it’s only a joke!” I comforted him. But where was Max? He was right near the van while Dad was repairing it.

Then it hit me. “Max!” I shouted, “Find Max!” “Max, Max...” but the ball was nowhere to be found. Suddenly, the sound in the corner of the backyard caught my attention. I crept quietly towards the direction. The little ball was pawing the earth carefully, trying to hide something in it- the very bolt! Oh, my God! At the sight of me, Max pricked up his ears and miaowed at me proudly as if to announce his victory. All of us laughed in relief. What an unforgettable beginning of a special trip!

Samples from Students

第二节：读后续写（满分 25 分）

Paragraph1:

Dad called the stores but none carried the bolt that fitted this old van. Standing rooted on the ground, he frowned his eyebrow and kept staring at the van. "I'd dreamed of the trip for so long." He murmured. A whimper escaped his throat. Hard to describe the expression on his face, but Dad seemed poor and upset, as if he had grown elder among two hours. A mixture feeling of relief and worry swam in my heart, making my stomach ~~constricked~~ constricted. Sensing Dad's blue feeling, I realized the gravity of the situation. Then suddenly, a ball of fur came into my sight — It was a cat ~~doll~~ doll for Max, as he was interested in all small ~~sa~~ objects.

Paragraph2: Then it hit me. "Max!" I shouted, "Find Max!" Hearting beating widely, I knew it probably be naughty Max who batted the missing bolts! Dad's eyes popped out ~~loud~~. ~~Surly~~ Surely he understood what I meant. For the next instant, he spun around, then dashed out while yelling for Max. We searched every corner of the house, finally he was there, playing merrily with ~~ony~~ one shining tiny round. It was exactly the fan bolts! At the same time, all of us burst into cheers, only Max <sup>was</sup> ~~got~~ confused. As the result, the van was fixed. Though my dream of a perfect vacation faded away, I beamed a radiant smile when dad ruffled my hair. It's true, family's company is the best vacation forever.

本篇文章的词汇较有特色：rooted, frown, murmur, swim, pop, burst into, ruffle, radiant。但是whimer 用在这里程度上有稍许过了，不适合形容一个坚强的父亲。constrick应该是constrict

第二节：读后续写（满分 25 分）

Paragraph1:

Dad called the stores but none carried the bolt that fitted this old van. Another try was made again. But even we almost turned the house upside down, the consequence was disappointing and there was no any shade of bolts. Wearily, we all threw us on the sofa for a rest, a dead silence secretly falling. My dad took on a look of frustration for his drowned dream. Seeing that, I felt my heart ached, my prior reluctance giving way to pure grief. Even my mind was racing frantically, however, no outcome. The mixture of tiredness and regret affected me, making my brain go blank and my only idea was to bury my face in Max's fur or to watch <sup>him</sup> he playing small objects.

Paragraph2:

Then it hit me. "Max!" I shouted, "Find Max!" Dad and Mom were surprised my sudden high-pitch voice. But shortly after that, they knew what I wanted to remind. Finally, we managed to find Max, accompanied by the lost bolts. A laughter of sheer happiness echoed in my house. Because of this "accident", we decided to stay for one more night. The next <sup>morning</sup> ~~morning~~, as the sun <sup>rose</sup> ~~rising~~ warmly, we started The Trip with fixed old van and excitement. Differently, this time I merged into the adventure group ~~to~~ completely, with yesterday's experience melting my opposite idea.

该篇习作紧扣话题，描写自然，能巧妙的运用一些句型和高级词汇。与所给短文融洽度高，与所给各段落开头语衔接合理。文章结尾与文本内容、文体呼应。但是字体欠缺优美。

第二节：读后续写（满分 25 分）

Paragraph1:

Dad called the stores but none carried the bolt that fitted this old van. Beaming with excitement, I crossed my fingers, closed my eyes and prayed for the back of my summer vacation in a low voice. However, dad was so disappointed to spoil the plan that he kept circling around the van, palms sweating. Suddenly, it rained. As the splashing raindrops hit against the windshield ~~on~~ frantically and the skies were overhung with a blanket of grey, we all sank into a dead ~~sil~~ silence. Engulfed by a surge of guilt mingled with being upset, I have no other optional alternative but to scratch my head to find a solution.

Paragraph2:

Then it hit me. "Max!" I shouted, "Find Max!" The hope that had been submerged suddenly resurfaced when I ~~for~~ found Max who was batting a button across the floor. Staring at Max tightly, I scooped him up, buried my face in his fur and kissed him on the cheeks when he captured the lost bolts immediately. With a sense of happiness creeping over me, I stretched my arms to embrace my parents, head drooping. After the water raining in sheets, the clear blue sky, the song of birds and the fresh air all kept me spellbound. The returning sun casting an orange <sup>ray of</sup> light over the distant mountains, we started our trip again, together with my cat Max.

1. 该篇习作使用了较多的高级词汇，句型也很丰富，但是情节跳跃太快。前秒还是眉开眼笑，暗自祈祷，后一秒就因为一场大雨而内疚了。这样的情绪变化有点太牵强。

2. 第一段的最后一句话与第二段段首衔接不够自然。

3. frantically这个词用在这里程度有点大，如此狂风大作的日子怎么出游？

4. 文章结尾“again”使用不合适，旅行根本没开始，谈不上再次出发。

学生好句欣赏:

- ✓ Exhausted and frustrated, Dad breathed a long sigh of depression and forced a smile.
- ✓ I could feel the strong sadness hidden behind Dad's smile, which made my heart sink.
- ✓ With his head drooped, the unexpected situation hit Dad like a bucket of icy water.
- ✓ Max curled into a ball and pawed the very missing bolt playfully.
- ✓ With the golden sunshine tracing the outline of the scenery, surges of laughter echoed in the old van.
- ✓ Pacing restlessly around, I barely knew what I could do to make him feel better.
- ✓ They all spun around to cast a puzzled look on me.

Thank You

