Karie double-checked the words on her spelling test. If she got 100 percent today, she'd win her class's First-quarter Spelling Challenge and a brand new dictionary. Plus, Ms. Smith had promised to do a handstand(倒立) if anyone got a perfect score.

Two more words to go. Q-u-i-c-k-l-y. H-o-n-e-s-t-y. Wait! She'd spelled honesty, not honestly! She erased the t-y and wrote l-y before handing in her paper.

"I'll correct these while you're at the break, " Ms. Smith said.

After the break Karie moved restlessly in her seat, tapping her pencil.

Ms. Smith walked to the front of the room and cleared her throat. Then, as if she were an Olympic gymnast(体操运动员), Ms. Smith threw both her feet into the air. "Congratulations,Karie! You did it!" she announced while upside down. The whole class erupted! Ms. Smith presented Karie with her prize. Kane smiled broadly as she read the note on the dictionary: To Kaire, for her perfect performance.

"Everything OK?" Mom asked as Karie burst through the front door after school. "Everything's PERFECT! Karie shouted, showing Mom her spelling test and prize. Mom hugged her "Put the test on the fridge so Dad can see it when he gets home."

"And Casper, too. "Karie lifted up her cat. "Can you spell quickly. Casper? And honesly, and..."

Karie's stomach tumbled (翻滚) to the floor. Honesly? H-O-N-E-S-L-Y!

"Karie, what's the matter?" asked Mom. "I don't feel so good, "Karie said, putting Casper down and squeezing the test paper into her backpack.

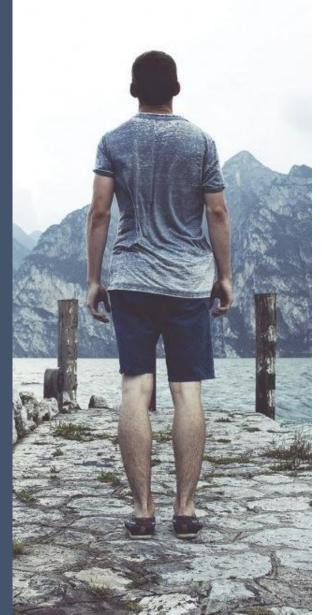

"Probably too much excitement." Mom rubbed her back. "How about some tea?"

Karie swallowed. "How do you know? At is exactly what I needed."

Karie dragged herself to her bed after some tea. How could she tell the whole class she didn't deserve the prize? That Ms. Smith did the handstand for nothing?

Paragraph 1: Soon Karie heard her dad come in with the smell of pizza floating in the air.____

Paragraph 2: Ms. Smith was unlocking the classroom door when Karie got to school the next morning.

Understand the story

In a spelling test, Kaire handled it carefully, double-checking the words she spelled and making corrections. Nervously but expectantly, she heard Mr. Smith's announcement that she had got a perfect score and was rewarded with a dictionary and Ms. Smith's handstand in the presence of the whole class.

Back home, while excitedly chatting with her mother, she suddenly realized that she had a mistake: She misspelled the word honestly. She struggled inside, wondering whether to tell the truth to the teacher or not the next day.....

下水作文:

Soon Karie heard her dad come in with the smell of pizza floating in the air. "Would you like a coffee, honey?" In this way Dad hoped to appreciate Karie's amazing performance in the spelling test, but what greeted him made him confused: cuddling in the room corner, Karie looked very sad, tears floating on her face. Immediately, Dad rushed over and gathered his princess into his arms. Hesitantly, Karie shared what had happened with her trusted father and asked for his advice. Thinking for a moment, the "sly" Dad simply asked Karie to decide on her own. Though feeling torn between the title and the honesty, she finally chose the latter. (96)

下水作文:

Ms. Smith was unlocking the classroom door when Karie got to school the next morning. "Morning, Early bird!" Ms. Smith smiled at her. Though hesitating for a while, Karie plucked his courage and confessed to Ms. Smith that he had actually made a spelling mistake in the test the day before. With these words, she handed over the test paper and the prize. "I'm really sorry, Ms. Smith..." She stood there nervously, wondering what Ms. Smith would do. But never could she have imagined that Ms. Smith put the dictionary back into his hands, saying, "Though you spelled the word honestly wrong, but you did the honesty right. I'm proud of you!" More than that, Ms. Smith once more did a handstand in the presence of the whole class. "This time for myself. A punishment for my carelessness," she joked. (125)

参考范文:

Soon Karie heard her dad come in with the smell of pizza floating in the air. "Where's your spelling test paper, sweetheart?" Dad asked, gazing at her eagerly. Karie gulped before trying to answer. "I...," she fumbled in her backpack, took out the paper and handed it unwillingly to her Dad. When Dad was admiring the perfect 100 on the paper, he spotted "honesly". Dad frowned, "Probably you don't deserve the prize." Immediately, the scene flashed back when a cashier in the pizza shop gave them too much change by mistake, her father went straight back to return the unexpected money instead of keeping it. She soon understood what she should do.

Ms. Smith was unlocking the classroom door when Karie got to school the next morning. "You're an early bird," Ms. Smith smiled at her. Hands slightly trembling, Karie gave Ms. Smith her test paper as well as the dictionary. Karie confessed her spelling mistake in the test, a pink flush spreading over her cheeks. "I see." Even though Ms. Smith tried to contain her emotions, surprise registered on her face. For a moment, Ms. Smith stood quietly reading the note on the dictionary. Then she picked up a pen, crossed out the word "perfect" and wrote "honest" instead before handing the prize back to Karie. "I get to keep this? Honestly?" Karie's jaw dropped. "For 'honestly', no." Ms. Smith grinned. "But for honesty, yes."

Three more words to go. N-i-c-e-l-y. Q-u-i-c-k-l-y. h-o-n-e-s-t-y. Wait! Shed spelled honesty, not honestly. She hurriedly erased the t-y and wrote l-y before handing in her paper.

Ms. McCormack graded the test papers at the break. Meanwhile, Karie sat restlessly in her seat with her fingers crossed. Then. Ms. McCormack walked to the front of the room and cleared her throat. As if she were an Olympic gymnast, Ms. McCormack's feet flipped(空翻)into the air "Congratulations. Karie! You did it!" she announced while upside down.

The whole class burst into applause! Ms McCormack righted herself and presented Karie with her prize. Karie grinned as she read the label on the box:

To Karie Carter, for her perfect first-quarter score in spelling.

"Everything OK?" Mom asked as Karie burst through the front door after school. Karie didn't answer. As if by magic, she took out her spelling test paper and prize and showed them to her mother. Mom hugged her, asking her to put the test paper on the fridge so that Dad could see it when he got home.

Karie took another look at the test paper before putting it on the fridge.

Her hands stopped in the mid air. She just couldn't believe her own eyes. Honesly?

YES! H-O-N-E-S-L-Y

Mom sensed something unusual and asked why. Karie stuffed the test paper into backpack and explained that she was just too excited. Mom brought her some tea. Yes, a"t" s exactly what she needed.

After drinking a little, Karie plodded(重步走)down the hall, lost in thought. How could he tell the class she hadn't earned the prize after all? That Ms. McCormack did the handstand for nothing?

Later Dad came in with excitement. "Where's your spelling test, Karie?" Dad asked eagerly. Karie looked away from her father. Anyhow, she reluctantly went to the room and pulled out the test paper. Dad fixed his eyes on the paper, a pleasant smile lifting the corner of his mouth. "I'm proud of you, sweetie. We need to celebrate it tonight." Karie pretended to be smiling all the time. Meanwhile a sense of guilt rose up inside her. Feeling she didn't deserve the prize, she had a sleepless night for the first time in her life.

The next morning, Karie went to school earlier than usual. Ms. Mc Cornack was unlocking the classroom. "You are an early bird." Ms. McCormack said. Karie's hands trembled. She handed her teacher the spelling paper and the dictionary. "I can't keep this. I misspelled 'honestly' and you didn't catch it." For a moment, the teacher stood quietly reading the label on the dictionary. Then picking up her pen, she crossed out the word 'perfect' and wrote 'honest' before returning the dictionary to karie. "Keep this. But for honesty."

Paragraph 1:

Karie swallowed, "How did you know? It is exactly what I needed." Shortly afterwards, she dashed into her room and pulled out the test paper. Recalling the joyful moment, a mixture of guilt and unwillingness overwhelmed her. Karie slowly picked up her pen, hesitant. "If I put the missing t back in, no one would ever know," she thought. The moment the nib touched the paper, she tossed the pen on the table and stormed out of the house with her backpack. She raced back to school as fast as her legs could carry her.

Paragraph 2:

Karie pushed open the door of Ms, McCormack's of fice. At the sight of Karie, Ms, McCormack asked her what was happening. Karie unzipped her bag, pulled out the prize and handed it to her teacher. Head down, she explained her mistake in spelling competition. For a moment, Ms, McCormack stood quietly reading the label on the dictionary. Then she picked up a pen, crossed out the word perfect on the label and wrote honest before handing the prize back to Karie. "I get to keep this? Honestly?" she asked suspiciously. "Not for the spelling mistake you made," Ms, McCormack smiled, "But for your honesty."
