Good morning, dear friends!

Welcome to our school!

We are now hosting the Traditional Chinese Culture Festival, aiming to help the students learn more about Chinese traditions and spread Chinese culture. There are varieties of activities during the month-long festival. If you like art, you can go to the traditional Chinese painting show. If you are a music lover, the Chinese folk concert will be your cup of tea. For calligraphy lovers, I recommend Chinese calligraphy lectures, where you can learn on the spot how to write.

Hundreds of teachers and students have attended the festival. They say they love the activities. I hope you will love them too.

Thank you for listening!

I was trying to make my voice sound calm. Planting my feet resolutely on the ground, I said to Sara: "Don't be afraid!" while holding her hand tight. The dog edged closer with the menacing "GRRR!" "Run!" I exclaimed, we sprinting to the kindergarten. Just as the dog was overtaking us, we threw ourselves inside. It was really close! We exchanged a happy smile. Seeing Sara stepping into the classroom, I turned for home, wanting desperately to narrate the thrilling episode to Mom.

I told mom what had happened. There followed no response. Then I saw Mom's tears. "I am so proud of you! You did what you had promised!" Mom said, holding me in a tight embrace, after which Mom looked into my eyes. She gave me some advice on tackling fierce dogs: "Next time you are cornered by such a dog, pretend to pick up a stone. It will be frightened away." My mom's words of praise and advice were deeply engraved in my heart. And I promised to be a better guardian of Sara.
