B

One of my most beloved possessions is my black, spiral-bound journal. It is a thin, wide-ruled, simple journal with no lock or key that I found at the dollar store. The journal has no monetary (货币的) value but instead holds its value of capturing my daily moments of gratitude.

The concept of a gratitude journal originated when my little brother began his gratitude journal. Although he is only twelve, he has truly grasped the concept of gratitude. I remember one of his journal entries saying, "I am thankful for my dog because I love walking her in the park". A simple walk in the park makes my video game enthusiastic brother grateful and joyful.

Seeing how my brother could practice gratitude daily, I was inspired to start my own gratitude journal. Initially, writing in my gratitude journal was such a struggle. On the most typical, dry days when I sat at my desk for hours studying for the SAT, what was there to be grateful for? At one point, I found my gratitude journal to be a pointless concept and I lost belief in my gratitude journal. In the time when I chose not to journal, I realized how plain my life was. I missed savoring every moment and taking delight in the little aspects of my life that made me smile.

I decided to continue writing in my gratitude journal once again. Even though I was not learning in a classroom over the summer, I still learned in a different manner. The journal has acted as a reflective, personal space for me to recall the past. The simplest moments of my life that were once overlooked are now the highlights of my day.

24. Why did the author mention his brother's journal?

- A. To praise his brother's vivid works.
- B. To express his gratitude to his brother.
- C. To amuse the readers with a funny story.

- D. To explain his decision for writing a journal.
25. What trouble did the author have in writing journals at the beginning?
- A. He didn't know what to write.
  - B. He was struggling with words.
  - C. He was too busy to write journals.
  - D. He couldn't find the meaning of life.
26. What does the underlined word "savoring" probably mean?
- A. Ruining.
  - B. Fighting.
  - C. Enjoying.
  - D. Expecting.
27. What does the author mainly intend to tell us?
- A. Learn from journals, and learn from life.
  - B. Be grateful for every moment of life.
  - C. Wherever you are, do remember to keep a journal.
  - D. The least important can be the highlight sometimes.

C

When given the choice, about 85% of people say they would not want to know about some negative event far in the future. Yet recently millions around the globe have downloaded FaceApp, which allows users to see how they might age in real life.

Many had fun with it, joking that they love the FaceApp old filter. Beneath the humor is a serious subject: How do we learn to relate to our future selves? It's important that we try to because it could help strengthen the long-term decisions that we make. However, we often fail to make sacrifices for the grayer versions of ourselves.

More than half of the respondents in a recent survey of 2,800 Americans said they rarely or never thought about what their lives might be like 30 years from now. This isn't surprising, since most of us are firmly rooted in the present and thinking about the distant future can seem like a distant priority(优先). My ongoing research might also offer an explanation: We tend to think about our future selves as if they are someone different from who we are today.

In an effort to narrow these empathy(共情)gaps, my research workmates and I have tried to humanize people's future selves in the same way others have tried to humanize charity receivers. Given that a photograph of one hungry child can spark emotional reactions, and cause viewers to donate, we have presented participants with vivid images of their distant selves.

That seems helpful. In a recently completed project in Mexico, we found that exposure to future-self images led more people to contribute to their pensions. Despite this research, I'm skeptical that the app users will suddenly increase their pension contributions and care about their health. The silly app isn't paired with an immediate opportunity to change any of these things.

The lesson from FaceApp shouldn't be that we need to marry hi-tech visuals with savings for retirement. The lesson, then, takes the form of a question: What more can be done to urge us to think about, care for who we will one day become?

28. What can we learn about FaceApp?
- A. It provides future-self images.
  - B. It is the most downloaded app.
  - C. It helps people make decisions.
  - D. It makes people age in real life.
29. Why do most respondents rarely think of their future life?
- A. They have known future life from FaceApp.
  - B. They fail to make sacrifices for their future.
  - C. They attach greater importance to the present.
  - D. They consider future selves the same as today's.
30. What does the underlined word "that" in paragraph 5 refer to?
- A. Completing a project in Mexico.

- B. Offering aging images of participants.
- C. Raising contributions among viewers.
- D. Giving a photograph of a hungry child.

31. What's the author's attitude to FaceApp?

- A. Positive.
- B. Doubtful.
- C. Ambiguous.
- D. Unfavorable.

D

The remains of an ancient ape(猿) found in a Bavarian clay site recently caught people's eyes. According to scientists, they may renew people's opinion on when humans' ancestors began standing upright.

An international team of researchers said the fossilized skeleton of a male ape that lived in the humid forests of what is now southern Germany bore a striking resemblance(相似之处) to modern human bones. In a paper published by the journal Nature, they concluded that the previously unknown species—named Danuvius guggenmosi—could walk on two legs but also climb like an ape.

The findings “raise fundamental questions about our previous understanding of the evolution of the great apes and humans,” said Madelaine Boehme, who led the research.

The question of when apes could walk on two legs has fascinated scientists since Charles Darwin first argued that they were the ancestors of humans. Previous fossil records of apes with an upright move—found in Crete and Kenya—dated only as far back as 6 million years ago. These apes are called Toumai.

Boehme, along with researchers from Bulgaria, Canada and the United States, examined more than 15,000 bones recovered from the archaeological remains found. Among the remains they were able to piece together were primate(灵长目动物) fossils belonging to four individuals that lived 11.62 million years ago. The most complete, an adult male, likely stood about 1 meter tall, weighed 31 kilograms and looked similar to modern-day bonobos, a species of chimpanzee.

Like humans, Danuvius had an S-shaped backbone to hold its body upright while standing. Unlike humans, though, it had a powerful big toe that would have allowed it to grab branches with its foot easily.

Fred Spoor, a paleontologist at the Natural History Museum in London, called the fossil finds “fantastic” but said they would likely be denied or suspected by others, not least because they could challenge many existing ideas about evolution.

32. Where did the scientists find the bones?

- A. Germany.
- B. Bulgaria.
- C. Kenya.
- D. Brazil.

33. What can we infer about the Danuvius?

- A. They could make S-shaped tools.
- B. They were a species of chimpanzee.
- C. They were found living in Crete and Kenya.
- D. They existed much earlier than Toumai.

34. How does Spoor feel about the finding?

- A. It is a support to evolution.
- B. It may cause much debate.
- C. It is the most fantastic finding.
- D. It denies the previous ideas.

35. Which of the following would be the best title for the text?

- A. The Secrets Revealed from Fossils
- B. Legend of Human's Ancestors
- C. Findings against the Theory of Evolution
- D. The Oldest Example of Upright Man Found

第二节 (共 5 小题; 每小题 2 分, 满分 10 分)

根据短文内容, 从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Why Walking Makes You a Better Worker?

We're busy at work, distracted (分心) by technology and often live in urban environments far from wild spaces. 36 The average American, for example, spends about 90% of their life indoors. But what happens if we make time for an hour outside each day?

37 You'll have to stand up and move, which is beneficial if most of your day involves sitting in front of a screen. Research shows short breaks can improve work enthusiasm, and a quick break in natural light will deliver a shot of vitamin D.

There's also a lot of work on the mental benefits of being in nature – on the state of being happy and on your brain's ability to make sense of life. "When people are all out in nature, even in urban nature, people tend to have more positive emotion and energy than when they are indoors. 38 " says Lisa Nisbet, associate professor at Canada's Trent University.

The idea that nature is good for us has been gaining ground since the 1980s. 39 Afterwards shinrin-yoku, the Japanese concept followed that absorbing the atmosphere in forests can benefit your health. Researchers of shinrin-yoku have since found plenty of physical and mental benefits, while global studies suggest time in nature can, for example, restore our ability to focus, increase creativity, and even help us live longer.

Of course, many of us live in cities with no ready access to forests or wilderness. 40 Various studies have shown that green environments in cities have beneficial effects.

- A. We also don't get out much.
- B. But it doesn't have to be a forest.
- C. People can get to a forest for a hike.
- D. In other words, people are happier in nature.
- E. There are some obvious benefits to going outside.
- F. Green and blue spaces are better than busy city streets.
- G. First came the theory that humans have a basic desire to connect with nature.

第二节 (共 10 小题; 每小题 1.5 分, 满分 15 分)

阅读下面材料, 在空白处填入 1 个适当的单词或括号内单词的正确形式。

How do you know I am really a human writing this article and not a robot?

Forbes uses ___61___ AI robot called Bertie to assist in providing reporters ___62___ first drafts for news stories. The Washington Post also ___63___ (have) a robot reporting program, Heliograf. In its first year, approximately 850 articles ___64___ (publish) and it even earned an award for its "Excellence in Use of Bots". However, The Post is using their system to not replace journalists, but to assist them and make their jobs ___65___ (easy) and faster.

Journalists are worried that robot content could weaken reliable media outlets that they write for by not ___66___ (produce) quality content. However, some say that will not be the case but rather increase the quality by giving reporters the ability ___67___ (concentrate) on quality over quantity. All in all, this could ___68___ (true) benefit journalism.

"The work is creative, it's about ___69___ (curious), it's about storytelling, it's about digging and holding governments accountable, it's critical thinking, it's judgment — and that is ___70___ we want our journalists spending their energy," said Lisa, the director of news partnerships for The A.P.

第二节

Dear Peter,

Knowing that you are involved in the Whole-book Reading Activity, I'd like to pick one from so many famous Chinese books---Journey to the West.

Basically, the novel is about Tang Sanzang's journey to fetch back some Buddhist scriptures and the difficulties he and his disciples face in between. Along the way, Sun Wukong, Zhu Bajie and Sha Wujing have to battle lots of demons, who all want their master because his flesh will give immortality to anyone who eats it.

Does it sounds captivating? If you want to give it a try, you'd better get a Chinese dictionary at hand for reference as it's written in old Chinese. I wish you would have fun reading it.

Yours,
Li Hua

Text 6

M: Thanks for coming in on such short notice. Did you find our office easily?

W: Yes. I just go with the directions you gave me.

M: Good. Let's get right into your interview. We're looking for someone who can work part-time and the job pays well.

W: No problem. I can do either full-time or part-time. But I prefer the latter. (62 词)

听第 7 段材料，回答第 8 至第 10 三个小题。现在，你有 15 秒钟时间阅读这三个小题。

Text 7

M: Honey, how was your morning jog?

W: Very good. I feel quite refreshed now. You should come with me sometime. Exercise is good for you.

M: You know me, I hate running. To be honest, I'd rather watch TV.

W: You can't be too lazy. The doctor suggests you should start playing sports to keep healthy.

M: OK. I'll follow the doctor's advice. But the question is which sport I should begin with.

W: How about swimming?

M: No, I'm afraid of water.

W: Really? How about skiing?

M: I can't. I'm afraid I'd break my leg.

W: Oh, well, is biking OK?

M: Good idea. Not only is it safe, but also it is environmentally friendly.

W: Then it is a deal. I will cycle with you to keep you company. (133 词)

听第 8 段材料，回答第 11 至第 13 三个小题。现在，你有 15 秒钟时间阅读这三个小题。

Text 8

W: Hi, ABC Computer. How may I help you?

M: I purchased this computer less than two months ago. But it just stopped working out of the blue, so I'd like to return it.

W: Okay sir, do you have your receipt or some other type of proof of purchase with you?

M: Yeah, here you go.

W: Oh, I'm sorry, sir. It appears that this item only has a 30-day money-back guarantee. Since you bought it 40 days ago, I'm afraid you can't get your money back.

M: But I think it's a faulty product. Why else would it just stop working?

W: Well, to test whether the product is faulty, you'll need to take it to a different location.

M: Come on. That's a bit inconvenient, don't you think?

W: I'm afraid that's our policy sir. If you don't want to do that, I can offer you a discount on repair service, or you may exchange the computer for a new one.

M: OK, I'd like a new one. (171 词)

听第 9 段材料，回答第 14 至第 17 四个小题。现在，你有 20 秒钟时间阅读这四个小题。

W: It is pouring outside. Do you get wet?

M: No, I took a taxi. It's very nice of you to invite me.

W: I'm very glad you could come, Mr. Simpson. Take a seat. Would you like to have some chicken?

M: Thank you. This is my first time to come to a Chinese restaurant. I have always longed to have a taste of Chinese food.

W: Great. Chinese dishes are prepared carefully to make sure they are very good in colour, flavor and taste.

M: Wonderful. Could you tell me the different features of Chinese food?

W: Generally speaking, Cantonese food is a bit light; Shanghai food is rather oily; and Hunan dishes are very spicy, having a strong and hot taste.

M: I like today's light food. It's the most delicious dinner I've ever had.

W: Well, I'm really glad to hear that. Mr. Simpson, would you like to try some Hunan dishes as well. They may also...

(173 词)

听第 10 段材料，回答第 18 至第 20 三个小题。现在，你有 15 秒钟时间阅读这三个小题。

Text 10

W: Hello, everyone. Today I'd like to deliver a speech about how to protect our hearing. According to the U.N. health agency, already 466 million people worldwide have suffered from hearing loss now and the figure is expected to nearly double to 900 million, or one in every 10 people by 2050. What a huge number it is! Therefore as young people, we should pay attention to the problem. I think the following steps can help us students deal with the problem. First, make sure you know when your surroundings are too loud. If you have to shout to be heard by someone near you, then your surroundings are too loud. You have to walk away from it. Second, if possible, turn down the music you are listening to until it feels comfortable. I think it is the best way to protect your ears against damage. Last, get your hearing checked regularly. Let's take action to reduce the risk of hearing loss. Thanks for your listening. (170 词)

第二节到此结束，现在请用两分钟的时间把听力答案填涂在答题卡上。
