第一部分 阅读理解（共两节，满分 50 分）

第一节（共 15 小题；每小题 2.5 分，满分 37.5 分）

阅读下列短文，从每题所给的 A、B、C 和 D 四个选项中，选出最佳选项。

A

Music and art festivals are fun and exciting events. If you're planning to go to a festival, it's important to plan your trip carefully to ensure that you're safe and have a good time.

■Bring clothes to keep warm or cool

In addition to your fun festival clothing, pack a raincoat, some light tank tops, and a sweater or sweatshirt. Don't forget longer pants for cool evenings or bad weather. In general, it's best to leave your umbrella at home because they can be dangerous in large crowds.

■Get a cheap tent and sleeping bag for multi-day festivals

A majority of people end up throwing their tent away after long festivals, since they normally break from the use. Pick up a less expensive tent with enough room for you and your friends and pack a comfortable sleeping bag for yourself. If you don't want to camp at the festival, remember to book an AirBnb or a hotel room nearby!

■Place a first aid kit in a proper place

Before the festival, buy a small first aid kit with band aids, and any medication that you need to take, in case you get minor injuries or a headache. Keep it in a proper place that's easily accessible, like your tent or car.

1. Why should umbrellas be left at home?

- | | |
|---------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| A. They take up too much space. | B. The weather will be terrible. |
| C. They might hurt someone. | D. Travelers prefer raincoats. |

2. What do most people do with tents after festivals?

- | | |
|---------------|-----------------|
| A. Sell them. | B. Return them. |
|---------------|-----------------|

- C. Pack them up. D. Throw them away.
3. What is suggested about the first aid kit?
- A. It should be put at hand. B. It ought to be big enough.
- C. It must contain all medicines. D. It has to be placed in the car.

B

Some students get so nervous before a test. They do poorly even if they know the material. Sian Beilock, a professor at the University of Chicago in Illinois, has studied these highly anxious test-takers. The students start worrying about the results. And when they worry, it actually uses up attention and memory resources(资源).

Professor Beilock and another researcher, Gerardo Ramirez, have developed a possible solution. Just before an exam, highly anxious test-takers spend ten minutes writing about their worries about the test.

The researchers tested the idea on a group of twenty anxious college students. They gave them two short maths tests. After the first one, they asked the students to either sit quietly or write about their feelings about the upcoming second test.

Professor Beilock says those who sat quietly scored an average of 12% worse on the second test. But the students who had written about their fears improved their performance by an average of 5%. Next, the researchers used younger students in a biology class. They told them before final exams either to write about their feelings or to think about things unrelated to the test. Professor Beilock says highly anxious students who did the writing got an average grade of B+, compared to a B- for those who did not.

“What we showed is that for students who are highly test-anxious, who’d done our writing intervention(干预), all of a sudden there was no relationship between test anxiety and performance. They were performing just as well as their classmates who don’t normally get nervous in these tests.”

But what if students do not have a chance to write about their fears immediately before an exam? Professor Beilock says students can try it themselves at home or in the library and still improve their performance.

4. What may the students start worrying about before an exam?
- A. Whether they can pass the exams.
- B. What other students do during the test.
- C. Whether they have remembered the materials.
- D. What kind of problems they will meet on the test paper.
5. What is the solution developed by researchers?
- A. Asking the students to ignore the test.
- B. Asking the students to focus on the test.

- C. Asking the students to sit quietly before the test.
- D. Asking the students to write about their worries before the test.
6. According to Professor Beilock, those who thought about things unrelated to the test _____.
- A. did better than those who wrote about their feelings
- B. did worse than those who wrote about their feelings
- C. were better at controlling their feelings
- D. became less nervous before the test
7. What can be learned from the last paragraph?
- A. Writing about our worries before an exam can work a bit.
- B. We can only write about our worries right before an exam.
- C. The best place to write about our worries is in the test room.
- D. It doesn't matter where we write about our worries before an exam.

C

The bus screamed to a stop in Nazareth, Israel. Five Australian backpackers boarded and struck up a conversation with me. They asked typical travelers' questions—where was I going and why was I traveling alone? My plan was to travel with a friend of a friend, I explained, but when I called her that morning, she didn't pick up and I had no other way to reach her. My stomach was in knots, but I decided to head out anyway, thinking I might run into her if I traveled to Tiberius, where we had planned to go together.

"Why don't you travel with us?" one of the backpackers offered. They were experienced adventurers who would work for a few months, save, then travel for as long as they could. Their current plan was to explore the Middle East and Europe in three months while working in London.

It seemed risky to travel with strangers, but my instinct said yes. For the next two weeks, I explored Israel with the backpackers and learned to trust my instincts in all types of new and interesting situations. When they hook a ride, I took the bus, but when they wanted to steal into the King David Hotel's swimming pool, I led the way. The world opened up to me because I chose to travel alone. I joined complete strangers, who become close friends. Years later, one couple from the backpacking group even flew from Sydney to Phoenix to be in my wedding. The trip was such a special experience that it gave me confidence in all areas of my life. Since then, I've backpacked alone across South Africa, sky-dived from 12,000 feet in New Zealand and even moved across the U.S. with no job lined up.

On my third day wandering in Israel with my new friends, I bumped into the woman I was supposed to meet. Though I was happy she was all right, I was grateful she hadn't picked up the phone.

8. By "My stomach was in knots" (in para.1), the author most likely means that she was _____.
- A. sick of riding on a bumpy bus
- B. nervous of meeting strangers

Perhaps what we should do now is restore meaning to the activity itself – real meaning. And for Alison Levine, a US mountaineer who reached the summit(山顶) of Mount Qomolangma in 2010, the meaning doesn't come with the summit itself, but with everything that led her up to it.

“When I did make it to the summit, what I realized is that standing on top of a mountain doesn't change you and doesn't change the world,” Levine told the NPR. “It's really about the journey. The journey is the most important thing on any mountain.”

It's true that we humans like to conquer. But the first step of conquering anything is probably to learn to conquer our own greed(贪婪) and ignorance.

12.What does the underlined word “crave” mean?

- | | |
|------------------------|-----------------------------|
| A. have no interest in | B. have a strong desire for |
| C. be optimistic about | D. be likely to win |

13.What is a major cause of the climbing tragedy this year, according to USA Today?

- A. Not having enough training and experience.
- B. Not bringing enough number of oxygen tanks.
- C. Not having professional climbing equipment.
- D. Not being accustomed to the cold weather.

14.What matters more to Levine when she climbs?

- A. Being on top of the world.
- B. Being able to change the world.
- C. The journey to reach the summit.
- D. The spirit to conquer the summit.

15.What attitude does the author hold toward climbing Mount Qomolangma?

- | | | | |
|---------------|--------------|-----------------|--------------|
| A. Regretful. | B. Critical. | C. Encouraging. | D. Doubtful. |
|---------------|--------------|-----------------|--------------|

第二节（共 5 小题；每小题 2.5 分，满分 12.5 分）

根据短文内容，从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

How to lower costs and improve the living quality?

There are numerous products posted on social media, and you might believe an electric toothbrush, Luna facial cleaning massager, a flight ticket to Phuket and so on will bring you a better life. But for many graduates or those who have worked for only one or two years, your income cannot keep pace with expense. 16 Here's how:

Keep running or doing yoga

It seems to be a challenge to afford a fitness center costing over 10,000 yuan in annual fees or for a personal trainer. But you can buy a pair of sneakers or a yoga mat instead. Running in a park regularly or doing yoga at home using free online resources is definitely a type of quality life. 17

Go to museums or libraries

Chasing young good-looking stars, watching their films and buying expensive tickets for their concerts are popular with many young people. 18 You seem to fail to take into account a variety of exhibitions and resources updated frequently in major cities. Why not have a try? What you need to do is to choose themes that you are interested in, make an online appointment in advance and then enjoy your weekend.

19

For some young people, the easy and instant access and the discount codes of online shopping make it an addictive draw. Sometimes what you buy online is not what you really need and the demands are created by the producers. For example, many buy new clothing and they don't wear.

20 Money is not the only thing that can drive your quality of living, but your optimistic attitude towards life and self-disciplined way of life are.

- A. Stop over-spending online
- B. Limit your shopping spending
- C. So, how can we save some money and improve quality of life?
- D. Making money and saving money are not the final goal of life.
- E. To live a quality life requires more self-discipline than money.
- F. However, this would do little to enrich your spiritual life and add to economic burdens.
- G. Exercise is more rewarding than holding a membership card at an expensive fitness club.
