阅读下列短文,从每题所给的 A、B、C 和 D 四个选项中,选出最佳选项。

A

The Walkmeter Walking & Hiking GPS has characteristics that are excellent for fitness walkers who want to improve their speed and distance. It uses your phone's GPS to measure the distance of your walks and hikes. It includes audio and voice integration (集成) so you can not only be informed of your workout statistics, but you can also listen to replies your friends send about your workout posts from Facebook and Twitter while you walk. Upgrading is less than $10 per year, far less than with some other apps, such as Endomondo.

Argus packs a lot into one lifestyle app. It functions as an all-day pedometer app. Your daily step count updates from your phone and includes active time, distance, calories, steps, and an hourly graph. It can also measure your heart rate at any time. You can easily take your heart rate during exercise and at rest. Besides, you can use the app's food diary and sleep timer. A wide range of fitness and diet plans are also provided on it.

Charity Miles gives your walking a purpose, because it turns your exercise into donations to a certain cause. Open up this free app (iOS or Google Play) and choose a charity. Start a workout, choosing walking, running, or cycling. For each completed mile, you'll have earned a donation for your chosen charity. The basic rate is 25 cents for walking and running miles and 10 cents for cycling miles, subject to a periodic cap. When you finish your walking, you must post to Facebook or Twitter to earn money for your charity.

21. What can users do with the Walkmeter Walking & Hiking GPS while exercising?
- A. Upgrade the app for $10.
B. Check comments of friends.
C. Reply to friends' posts online.
D. Make personalized fitness plans.
22. What is special about Charity Miles?
- A. It is free of charge.
B. It can earn you money.
C. It offers a new way of donating.
D. It is connected to social software.
23. Where is the text probably taken from?
- A. A website on app ratings.
B. An online fitness course.
C. A medical report.
D. An advertisement for phones.

B

Christa Barfield of Germantown starts each day by drinking a cup of hot tea. When she lifts the cup to her lips, she smells the tea gently and looks forward to the day ahead. "Drinking a cup of tea is a form of self-reflection," Barfield said. "When I'm doing my praying or meditation (冥想), drinking tea allows me to sit in the moment and be present."

Barfield, 32, fell in love with tea in 2018 after taking a trip to the Caribbean Island of Martinique where every morning with her breakfast she was served a hot cup from the couple she visited. There, the host would take live herbs from his garden, put them in a cup, and pour hot water over them. "It was very different from what we do in America," Barfield said. "The tea had a fresher taste."

When she returned to Germantown, she was inspired to start a tea company of her own. In August, she started Viva Leaf Tea, a company that sells blended (调配的) teas from herbs and plants that Barfield grows from seed. The name of the company, Viva Leaf Tea, is a nod to the fresh herbal teas she drank in Martinique.

“I started a tea company for wellness reasons,” Barfield explained. “It helped me to keep my 10 years of healthcare experiences and reuse them in my own way.” Before starting Viva Leaf Tea, Barfield worked in healthcare management at several private practices in Philadelphia. In 2018, she earned a bachelor’s degree in healthcare administration from Saint Joseph’s University.

“We take all of our herbs very seriously,” she said. “There are thousands of tea companies all over the world. But you don’t really know where the tea leaves come from.” Barfield provides a “farm to cup” experience for her customers. With every order, customers are provided with information about the origins of the herbs used and their possible health benefits.

24. What did Barfield find from her trip to Martinique?

- A. Americans’ love for tea.
- B. A new way to drink tea.
- C. The importance of fresh tea.
- D. The popularity of tea in the Caribbean.

25. What does the name of Barfield’s company indicate?

- A. She is devoted to making blended teas.
- B. She takes great interest in growing herbs.
- C. She is crazy about starting a company of her own.
- D. She was impressed by the herbal teas in Martinique.

26. What does Barfield want to do through her company?

- A. Share her healthcare experiences.
- B. Introduce a new way to make tea.
- C. Inspire people to learn tea culture.
- D. Help people keep healthy in her way.

27. What does the author try to convey in the last paragraph?

- A. What health benefits herbal teas have.
- B. How Viva Leaf Tea advertises its products.
- C. What makes Viva Leaf Tea’s products different.
- D. Where customers can find the origins of herbal teas.

C

Constructed in the third century BC, the Terracotta Army is a collection of clay sculptures presenting the forces of the First Emperor of China—Qin Shi Huang. The figures include more than 8,000 soldiers, 130 chariots with 520 horses. Their varying clothes, facial features and body types have long impressed people. But historian Dan Snow says, “The amazing realism increases the great mystery surrounding these terracotta figures, where do they come from? They are nothing like any figure made in China before them, something changed. Something remarkable happened here 2,200 years ago.”

Mr Snow explains historians have long believed Ancient China remained separated from the rest of the world. But the Terracotta Army could disprove that theory.

The time of the First Emperor was around 220BC, when, on the eastern edge of the Eurasian (欧亚的) landmass, was the Chinese worlds with competing mini-states over there. Over on the west of Eurasia, the Roman Empire started to expand over here and Greece was a great power.

“What’s going on artistically in the East and West is very different in the third century BC. The classic Greek art is easy to recognize, with the absolute high watermark of artistic expression, beautiful—metre-and-a-half tall, human in its look. But in the Chinese world, you’ve got just 10cm tall, far more basic,” says Mr Snow. He continues, “Then something changes, in fact, everything changes—there’s a revolution. Suddenly, in 220BC you get the Terracotta Army lightyears ahead of what’s gone before. It starts to look far less like before and far more like what’s going on in the western world, both life-size, both lifelike, both attempts at realism.”

This couldn’t be more important, because it’s always been assumed that China developed in isolation (隔离). But if that’s not the case, if the First Emperor of China imported western ideas and techniques to create his extraordinary arts, that forces us to completely rewrite the history books.

28. What confused Dan Snow about the Terracotta Army?

- A. Why Qin Shi Huang ordered to create them.
- B. Who instructed ancient people to create them.
- C. Why their design was different from previous time.
- D. What kind of clothes ancient people preferred to wear.

29. What do most historians think of Ancient China?

- A. It was closed to the outside world.
- B. Many mini-states coexisted peacefully.
- C. Building army of sculptures was very common then.
- D. It built a good relationship with the rest of the world.

30. What can we infer about the clay sculptures in Ancient China before 220BC?

- A. They were in small size.
- B. Their styles changed greatly.
- C. Their facial expressions seemed real.
- D. They looked similar to the Greek ones.

31. What is the best title for the text?

- A. The Development of Chinese Art
- B. Westerners Found in Ancient China
- C. The Discovery of China’s Terracotta Army
- D. Historians Reconsidering the Remote Past of China

D

More than 5,000 species of birds manage annual round-trip migrations (迁徙). These journeys can be thousands of miles, with many birds often returning to the exact same nesting and wintering place from year to year.

Migration is very important in the life cycle of birds, and without this annual journey many birds would not be able to raise their young. Birds migrate to find the richest and most abundant food that will provide adequate energy to raise young birds. If no birds migrated, competition for adequate food during breeding (繁殖) seasons would be fierce and many birds would starve.

Of course, not all birds migrate. Some birds can take advantage of different food sources (来源) as seasons change, allowing them to stay in one place all year round. Other birds are better adapted to cold climates with thicker fat reserves and better feathers, and they can survive long cold seasons while they forage for winter food. For more than half the world's birds, however, migration is necessary to stay alive.

When the timing is right for their migrating needs, birds will begin their journey. Food, weather, temperature and illness or injury are several minor aspects that may affect migration by a day or two, but most bird species follow precise migration "schedule". While migration is at its finest during spring and fall, birds migrate all throughout the year. Migration is actually an ongoing process and there are always birds at some stage of their journeys. The distance the birds must fly, the length of time it takes to mate and the amount of young birds all affect when any one species is migrating.

Migratory birds have several changes before the journey. Among them is hyperphagia, the process of migration-related weight gain. As daylight changes and migration times near, a bird's hormone levels will change and they will build a greater fat supply. Besides, old, ragged feathers create more wind drag and air resistance, which requires a bird to use more energy in flight, so many birds replace old feathers with new ones.

32. Without migration, many birds would _____.

- A. stop reproducing during breeding seasons
- B. abandon young birds for lack of food
- C. be unable to find places for nesting
- D. be in danger of starvation

33. What does the underlined phrase "forage for" mean in Paragraph 3?

- A. Run out of.
- B. Cut down on.
- C. Search for.
- D. Wait for.

34. What can we learn about birds' migration?
- A. Most birds begin their journey at the arrival of spring.
 - B. Warm temperature usually advances it by a day or two.
 - C. There is almost little migration of birds in winter.
 - D. Birds' migration is affected by various aspects.
35. How will migratory birds benefit from the process of hyperphagia?
- A. They will tend to use less energy in flight.
 - B. They will store enough energy for travelling.
 - C. They will replace old feathers with new ones.
 - D. They will better sense the changes of daylight.

第二节 (共 5 小题;每小题 2 分,满分 10 分)

根据短文内容,从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

We see big lies. 36 We think we're fundamentally different from those big liars like Bernie Madoff or Tiger Woods.

But behind big lies are a series of small tricks or lies. Dan Ariely, a professor of psychology and behavioral economics, writes about this in his book The Honest Truth about Dishonesty. 37

These small lies are quite common. There are many of us who might go a little too fast on the highway, or pocket extra change at a gas station. As humans, ~~it~~ seems we are natural liars. 38

But still, we want to look in the mirror and see ourselves as ~~good~~, honest people, though we benefit from our lying. That's why Ariely describes ~~honesty~~ honesty as something of a state of mind. He thinks the IRS (税务局) should have ~~people~~ people promise to be honest when they start working on their taxes, not when they're done. 39

Ariely says the research about honesty isn't all negative (消极的). 40 But we usually don't take those chances. "There's a lot of good in us," he said.

- A. Most people tell some kind of lies every day.
- B. When talking about dishonesty, we always think of something big.
- C. But when we think to ourselves, we believe we could never do that.
- D. We have plenty of chances to lie and cheat, without getting caught.
- E. Some of the most common lies are white lies, which are typically considered to be harmless.
- F. He found what separates honest people from not-honest people is not necessarily character, but chance.
- G. Setting the stage for honesty is more effective than asking someone after the fact whether or not they lied.

第二节 (共 10 小题;每小题 1.5 分,满分 15 分)

阅读下面短文,在空白处填入 1 个适当的单词或括号内单词的正确形式。

Traditionally, we Chinese attach great importance to our hometown and are often 61 (willing) to migrate to other places. However, in present times, in particular after the reform and opening-up policy was introduced, more and more people fancy 62 (settle) down in more developed cities just as my family members did.

My parents were both born in Sichuan. In 1963, a time when 63 (graduate) were assigned (分配) jobs by the government, my father received a job in Beijing. After I was born in 1969, my parents went to work in Xinjiang.

In the 1980s, Chinese society 64 (fill) with hope, and people worked hard to achieve their dreams. So did my family. In 1988, admitted 65 Renmin University of China, I went to Beijing. It took me 72 hours by train 66 (travel) from Xinjiang to Beijing, with 67 distance of over 3,770 kilometers. In 1990, my brother also passed the entrance examination and was enrolled in a university in Guangzhou, 68 he now lives and works.

Recalling the changes over the past four decades, I think 69 (improve) transportation is very important to our family. The long distance kept us apart most of the time. Today, the speed and methods of transportation have been improved a lot, which has 70 (entire) transformed our life and can bring us together easily.
