Most Chinese diners pick up food from communal platters(公盘) with the same pair of chopsticks that they then use to eat, or serve others. Double dipping is the norm. But the government hopes to change habits by urging people to use a second pair of chopsticks — just for serving.

State news agencies are calling it a “dining table revolution.” Dr. Zhong Nanshan and Dr. Zhang Wenhong, outspoken infectious disease experts who have become celebrities since the outbreak of the COVID-19, have voiced their support. The authorities across the country are running advertisements with slogans like: “The distance between you and civilized dining is just one pair of serving chopsticks.”

Some restaurants and diners have followed the call. They are offering discounts to diners who use serving chopsticks. In the eastern Chinese city of Hangzhou, more than 100 outstanding restaurants have formed a “Serving Chopsticks Alliance.”

Still, resistance is strong. Many see sharing food with one’s own chopsticks as among the most genuine expressions of China’s communal culture and emphasis on family, no less essential than hugging is to Americans or the cheek kiss is to the French. Serving chopsticks are typically associated with formal settings, like feasts and meals with strangers.

By contrast, wheat-eating northerners, and particularly the men, take pride in what Chinese call “eating big and drinking big,” without caring about such small concerns as germs and bacteria. Never mind a small, recent experiment by government experts who found that the level of bacteria in dishes for which serving chopsticks were used was as little as 0.4 percent the level of dishes shared in the regular fashion.

21. What does the underlined sentence “Double dipping is the norm.” mean in paragraph 1?

- A. Normally, people use reusable chopsticks in a meal.
- B. It’s common to use two pairs of chopsticks in a meal.

- C. It's a common practice to share food with one's own chopsticks.
 - D. People will dip their chopsticks in soup twice before serving others.
22. The author mentioned Dr. Zhong Nanshan and Dr. Zhang Wenhong in paragraph 2 to_____.
- A. introduce the topic
 - B. show their popularity
 - C. draw readers' attention
 - D. strengthen the persuasion of the call
23. Which of the following statements is NOT true according to the passage?
- A. People should use serving chopsticks whenever dining.
 - B. It's civilized to use serving chopsticks when dining out.
 - C. Northern men especially mind using serving chopsticks.
 - D. Some restaurants encourage diners to use serving chopsticks with discounts.

Chinese Culture Shown to the World with Love

Li Ziqi, a short video blogger specializing in traditional Chinese cooking and handicrafts, has gained worldwide popularity.

Li has about 20 million followers on Sina Weibo, China's equivalent to Twitter, plus 7 million followers on overseas social media networks. Many foreigners say they have got to know traditional Chinese food culture via her channel.

It is the spirit of craftsmanship(技艺) behind her works that makes Li's video clips attractive. She strictly follows the traditional steps and procedures in making traditional Chinese food and handicrafts, such as peach flower wine and silk, and goes to great lengths to ensure her videos are accurate. Sometimes she spends several months producing one of her videos.

Li has been inheriting(继承) traditional Chinese culture in a rather creative way. A closer look at her videos will show that they are never with any "analysis" that makes people feel bored. They just show audiences each and every detail of traditional Chinese culture so that the latter knows how Chinese live their beautiful and elegant lives. It is that universal appeal that makes her works so attractive. Thanks to Li's efforts, many non-material cultural heritages that only existed in memories and written records now appear before our eyes. Via her short videos, Li presents the image of a beautiful and friendly China.

With the growth of the Chinese economy, people overseas are showing more interest in traditional Chinese culture. Li has shown how to satisfy that interest in a good way, namely showing the best parts of traditional Chinese culture with her heart.

To effectively present the beauty of Chinese culture to the world, we need more Li Ziqi.

24. What can we learn about Li Ziqi's video clips?
- A. They promote the sales of Chinese food and handicrafts.
 - B. They attract a large number of foreigners to visit her online shop.
 - C. They are based on her family's recipes of making traditional Chinese food.
 - D. They are aimed to introduce traditional Chinese food culture and handicrafts worldwide.
25. What could be inferred from Paragraph 3 and Paragraph 4?
- A. Analysis of Chinese culture in Li's videos makes people bored.

- B. Details and accuracy play significant roles in the success of Li's videos.
- C. Li makes sure all of her video clips are short enough to be downloaded.
- D. Cultural heritages usually exist in memories and written accounts.

26. What is the author's purpose in writing the passage?

- A. To provide guidance on cooking and making handicrafts.
- B. To suggest a way of attracting more followers on Sina Weibo.
- C. To encourage more people to make efforts to bring Chinese culture to the world.
- D. To give an example of how to gain worldwide popularity as a short video blogger.

Choosing to forget something might take more mental effort than trying to remember it, researchers at the University of Texas discovered. Their findings suggest that in order to forget an unwanted experience, more attention should be focused on it.

"Decades of research has shown that we have the ability to forget something out of our own free will, but in what way our brains do that is still being questioned. Once we can figure out how memories are weakened and come up with ways to control this, we can design treatment to help people rid themselves of unwanted memories," said Jarrod Lewis-Peacock, the study's senior author.

Memories are dynamic constructions of the brain that regularly get updated, adjusted and reorganized through experience. The brain is constantly remembering and forgetting information — and much of this happens automatically during sleep.

Their findings not only confirmed that humans have the ability to control what they forget, but that successful intentional forgetting required more activity than what was required to remember.

"A proper level of brain activity is important to this forgetting mechanism(机制). Too strong, and it will strengthen the memory; too weak, and you won't change it," said Tracy Wang, lead author of the study. "Importantly, it's the intention to forget that increases the activation(激活) of the memory, and when this activation hits the proper level sweet spot, that's when it leads to later forgetting of that experience."

The researchers also found that participants were more likely to forget scenes than faces. "We're learning how these mechanisms in our brain respond to different types of information, and it will take a lot of further research before we understand how to use our ability to forget," said Lewis-Peacock.

27. What remains a puzzle to researchers?

- A. How our memories can be strengthened.
- B. How our brains voluntarily forget something.
- C. What effect unwanted memories have on our brains.
- D. Whether our brains can voluntarily forget something.

28. Which of the following words can best describe memories?

- A. Active.
- B. Lasting.
- C. Casual.
- D. Ridiculous.

29. According to Tracy Wang, forgetting is possible when_____.

- A. the information involves more emotion
- B. the activation of the memory reaches a certain level

- C. people respond to new experiences in an adaptive way
- D. people have the strongest intention to forget something

30. What can be a suitable title for the passage?

- A. What It Takes to Forget an Unwanted Experience
- B. Strong Memories Have a Great Influence on Health
- C. Forgetting Uses More Brain Power than Remembering
- D. How to Train Our Brains to Voluntarily Forget Something

第二节：（共 5 小题；每小题 2 分，满分 10 分）

根据短文内容，从短文后的选项中选出能填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Your house may have an effect on your figure. Experts say the way you design your home could play a role in whether you pack on the pounds or keep them off. You can make your environment work for you instead of against you. 31.

Open the curtains and turn up the lights. 32, for people are often less self-conscious(难为情) when they're in poorly lit places — and so more likely to eat lots of food. If your home doesn't have enough window light, get more lamps and flood the place with brightness.

33. Research suggests warm colors fuel our appetites. In one study, people who ate meals in a blue room consumed 33% less than those in a yellow or red room. Warm colors like yellow make food appear more inviting, while cold colors make us feel less hungry. So when it's time to repaint, go blue.

Don't forget the clock — or the radio. People who eat slowly tend to consume about 70 fewer calories per meal than those who rush through their meals. Begin keeping track of the time, and try to make dinner last at least 30 minutes. And while you're at it, actually sit down to eat. 34. It makes you less likely to rush through a meal.

Downsize the dishes. 35. We eat about 22% more when using a 12-inch plate instead of a 10-inch plate. When we choose a large spoon over a smaller one, total intake jumps by 14%. And we'll pour about 30% more liquid into a short, wide glass than a tall, skinny glass.

- A. Mind the colors
- B. Colors are important
- C. Big serving bowls and plates can easily make us fat
- D. Dark environments are more likely to encourage overeating
- E. If you need some help slowing down, turn on relaxing music
- F. Here are some ways to turn your home into part of your diet plan
- G. Suggested ways to make your home environment relaxing are as follows

Laurie sat quietly in the empty dressing room at the ice-skating rink(溜冰场). She had not been skating in any competition since her left knee was badly injured in an accident six months ago. As she waited for her turn to skate, Laurie was very nervous. “If I can win today,” she thought, “I can skate in the World Cup next year and then maybe I can make it to the Olympics.”

Laurie was told that she had a tough competitor this year, a girl named Jinny Jordan who was really strong in everything. “She is the one you have to beat this year,” said the coach.

Minutes later, the door swung open and Laurie saw a young woman who was about her own age. The young woman dropped her skating bag onto a chair. The bag fell to the floor with a thud (砰地一声). “Hi, I’m Jinny Jordan,” she said.

Laurie felt uncomfortable as she looked at Jinny. “So this is my competitor,” thought Laurie. “Because of her, I may lose tonight. ”

“This costume(表演服) was my mom’s idea,” Jinny said, looking down at her red, white, and blue skating dress. “It looks like a flag.”

Laurie couldn’t keep from smiling. She pointed to Jinny’s bag, “Some stuff fell out of your bag.” Jinny looked down. As she began to gather her belongings, the door opened.

“Jinny,” called someone, “You’d better give the music tape to the sound engineer right away.”

“Oh, my God! I thought I had handed it hours ago. It’s a green box with my initials(姓名首字母) written on it,” screamed Jinny, hurrying out.

Laurie knew that music was nearly as important to the program as the skating itself. If she lost her music tape, she might as well forget about skating. Laurie stood up and walked to the chair to do a few more knee bends.

Dear Mr. Wang,

I'm Li Hua, a student in Room 312. I'm writing to make a complaint about my roommates' inconsiderate behavior.

Firstly, much to my dissatisfaction, some of them seldom participate in cleaning up the room, usually making it messy. Worse still, my items are often used without permission. What annoys me most is that they are constantly chatting loudly till midnight, which dramatically impacts my rest. Owing to these circumstances, I have found it difficult to concentrate on my lessons recently.

Thus, I'd appreciate it if you could give due attention to the matter and help create a harmonious atmosphere at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely yours,

Li Hua

续写参考范文

Paragraph 1

Suddenly Laurie saw a dark green box with letters "J. J" behind the leg of the dressing table. She picked it up. "It's Jinny's music tape!" she exclaimed, surprised and excited. Her heart began to pound wildly, "What I'd have to do is to forget that I found this. Jinny would look pretty ridiculous skating without music. And then I would win." Laurie shivered slightly. Then another voice echoed in her mind, "Is winning really so important to me that I'd be willing to cheat for it?" Without hesitation, she lunged towards the door and called Jinny loudly.

Paragraph 2

Feeling relieved, Laurie skated quickly to the center of the rink after the announcer finally called her name. Music filling the stadium, she skated gracefully and beautifully. Her left knee was fine and she felt herself gliding smoothly like a bird. The audience applauded from time to time enthusiastically, supporting her in her comeback. When she finished, her coach ran up to her and hugged her, “You made it, Laurie!” Laurie smiled and thought about Jinny’s music tape. “No one will ever know how close I really came to losing,” she said softly to herself.

Text 10

W: ⑰Easter Island is an island in the southeastern Pacific Ocean, 3,500 km off the coast of South America. A European explorer discovered it on Easter Sunday on April 5th, 1722. It has also been called "the Belly Button of the World", because there are no other islands near it. The earliest people lived there from 700 to 1100. Over the next 800 years, it developed into a complex society. ⑱The people lived without war, until sickness killed most of the population. ⑲The most interesting thing about the island is the 887 stone statues that are found there. The statues look like huge faces, with big noses and lips. Most of these stone statues are four meters tall, but the biggest one is ten meters tall. Some could have been twenty-one meters tall, but they were destroyed in earthquakes. ⑳Until 1987, many people thought it was impossible for ancient people to move the heavy stones. Some people said visitors from another planet brought them there. The secret of Easter Island had finally been solved when some people proved the heavy stones could be moved with simple equipment.
