

M2U4

How Daisy Learned to Help Wildlife

杭州师范大学附属中学 苏殷旦

What can we learn from this video?

Numbers: decreasing

In danger of dying out

Endangered Species of Wildlife

World Wildlife Fund (WWF)

It was an organization aiming to save endangered wildlife.

How Daisy Learned to Help Wildlife

What is the writing style of this passage?

A. An exposition

B. An argumentation

C. A narration

The basic elements(要素) of a story

A narrative story	who	Daisy
	when	One day
	where	Tibet; Zimbabwe; A thick rainforest
	what	Go on a magical journey why how

Read for Structure

- 1. Daisy had always longed to help endangered species of wildlife. One day she woke up and found a flying carpet by her bed. "Where do you want to go?" it asked. Daisy responded immediately. "I'd like to see some endangered wildlife," she said. "Please take me to a distant land where I can find the animal that gave fur to make this sweater." At once the carpet flew away and took her to Tibet. There Daisy saw an antelope looking sad. It said, "We're being killed for the wool beneath our stomachs. Our fur is being used to make sweaters for people like you. As a result, we are now an endangered species." At that Daisy cried, "I'm sorry I didn't know that. I wonder what is being done to help you. Flying carpet, please show me a place where there's some wildlife protection."*
- 2. The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zimbabwe. Daisy turned around and found that she was being watched by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter. "Don't laugh," said the elephant, "We used to be an endangered species. Farmers hunted us without mercy. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the large tour companies." So the government decided to help. They allowed tourists to hunt only a certain number of animals if they paid the farmers. Now the farmers are happy and our numbers are increasing. So good things are being done here to save local wildlife".*
- 3. Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed itself. "What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."*
- 4. Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help." The monkey agreed. The carpet flew home. As they landed, things began to disappear. Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey, too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF...*

Read for Structure

1. Daisy had always longed to help endangered species of wildlife. One day she woke up and found a flying carpet by her bed. "Where do you want to go?" it asked. Daisy responded immediately. "I'd like to see some endangered wildlife," she said. "Please take me to a distant land where there are no hunters." At once the carpet flew away and took her to Tibet. There Daisy saw a sign that said, "Warning: Please do not touch the wool beneath our stomachs. Our fur is being used to make sweaters for people like you. As a result, we are now an endangered species." At that Daisy cried, "I'm sorry I didn't know that. I wonder what is being done to help you. Flying carpet, please show me a place where there's some wildlife protection."

Scene I antelope

2. The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zimbabwe. Daisy turned around and found that she was being watched by an elephant. "Have you seen an antelope?" Daisy asked. The elephant burst into laughter. "Don't laugh," said the elephant, "We used to be an endangered species. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the farmers. But then the WWF decided to help. They allowed tourists to hunt only a certain number of animals if they paid the farmers. Now the farmers are happy and our numbers are increasing. So good things are being done here to save local wildlife".

Scene II elephant

3. Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed itself. "What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which cures malaria." Daisy was amazed. "Please take me to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together."

Scene III ?

4. Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together." The carpet began producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help." The monkey agreed. The carpet flew home. As they landed, things began to disappear. Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey, too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF...

Read for Details—Scene 1 (Para 1)

eager to do

Daisy had always longed to help endangered species of wildlife. One day she woke up and found a flying carpet by her bed. "Where do you want to go?" it asked. Daisy responded immediately. "I'd like to see some endangered wildlife," she said. "Please take me to a distant land where I can find the animal that gave fur to make this sweater." At once the carpet flew away and took her to Tibet. There Daisy saw an antelope looking sad. It said, "We're being killed for the wool beneath our

	Feeling	Supporting sentences
Before the journey	Eager; Excited	1. Daisy had always longed to help endangered wildlife. 2. Daisy responded immediately.

Read for Details—Scene 1 (Para 1)

At once the carpet flew away and took her to Tibet. There Daisy saw an antelope looking sad. It said, "We're being killed for the wool beneath our stomachs. Our fur is being used to make sweaters for people like you. As a result, we are now an endangered species." At that Daisy cried, "I'm sorry I didn't know that. I wonder what is being done to help you. Flying carpet, please show me a place where there's some wildlife protection."

Place	Feeling	Supporting sentence	The situation of wildlife	Evidence
In Tibet	sad	① ②	terrible	1. The antelopes are being killed for wool and fur . 2. As a result, now the antelopes have become endangered species .

Read for Details—Scene 2 (Para 2)

The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zimbabwe. Daisy turned around and found that she was being watched by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter. "Don't laugh," said the elephant, "We used to be an endangered species. Farmers hunted us without mercy. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the large tour companies." So the government decided to help. They

Place	Feeling	Supporting sentence	The situation of wildlife	Evidence
In Zimbabwe	relieved; happy	①

Read for Details—Scene 2 (Para 2)

潮恩教育
www.sunedu.com

The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zimbabwe. Daisy turned around and found that she was being watched by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter. "Don't laugh," said the elephant, "We used to be an endangered species. Farmers hunted us without mercy. They

A harmonious scene:

Human beings live in peace / harmony with wildlife animals. paid the farmers. Now the farmers are happy and our numbers are increasing. So good things are being done here to save local wildlife".*

Read for Details—Scene 2 (Para 2)

The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zaire. What did the farmers do to the elephant in the past? by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter." Don' t laugh," said the elephant," We used to be an endangered species. Farmers hunted us without mercy. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the large tour companies." So the government without pity p. They allowed tourists to hunt only a certain number of animals if they paid the farmers. Now the farmers are happy and our numbers are increasing .So good things are being done here to save local wildlife".

Read for Details—Scene 2 (Para 2)

潮恩教育
www.sunedu.com

The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zanzibar. Daisy turned around and found that she was being watched by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter." Don' t laugh," said the elephant," We used to be an endangered species. How?rs hunted us without mercy. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the large tour companies." So the government decided to help. They allowed tourists to hunt only a certain number of animals if they paid the farmers. Now the farmers are happy and our numbers are increasing .So good things are being done here to save local wildlife".

Read for Details—Scene 2 (Para 2)

潮恩教育
www.sunedu.com

*The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zimbabwe. Daisy turned around and found that she was being watched by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter." Don' t laugh," said the elephant," We used to be an endangered species. Farmers hunted us without mercy. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the large tour companies." So the government decided to help. They allowed tourists to hunt only a certain number of animals if they paid the farmers. Now the farmers are happy and our numbers are increasing. So good things are being done here to save local wildlife".

What's the result of the government's doing so?

Read for Details—Scene 2 (Para 2)

The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zimbabwe. Daisy turned around and found that she was being^① watched by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter. "Don't laugh," said the elephant, "We used to be an endangered species. Farmers hunted us without mercy. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the large tour companies." So the government decided to help. They

Place	Feeling	Supporting sentence	The situation of wildlife	Evidence
In Zimbabwe	Relieved happy	①	favorable	1. In the past, farmers hunted them without mercy 2. Later, the government protected them by stopping overhunting

Read for Details—Scene 3 (Para 3-4)

Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed itself. "What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

4. Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help." The monkey agreed. The carpet flew home. As they landed, things began to disappear. Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey, too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF...

Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed itself. "What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "When I was a child, I saw a doctor who told me that there is a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

It serves as a linking sentence so as to make the paragraphs more connected and coherent

1. Daisy had always longed to help endangered species of wildlife. One day she woke up and found a flying carpet by her bed. "Where do you want to go?" it asked. Daisy responded immediately. "I'd like to see some endangered wildlife," she said. "Please take me to a distant land where I can find the animal that gave fur to make this sweater." At once the carpet flew away and took her to Tibet. There Daisy saw an antelope looking sad. It said, "We're being killed for the wool beneath our stomachs. Our fur is being used to make sweaters for people like you. As a result, we are now an endangered species." At that Daisy cried, "I'm sorry I didn't know that. I wonder what is being done to help you. Flying carpet, please show me a place where there's some wildlife protection."

2. The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zimbabwe. Daisy turned around and found that she was being watched by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter. "Don't laugh," said the elephant, "We used to be an endangered species. Farmers hunted us without mercy. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the large tour companies." So the government decided to help. They allowed tourists to hunt only a certain number of animals if they paid the farmers. Now the farmers are happy and our numbers are increasing. So good things are being done here to save local wildlife".

3. Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed itself. "What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

4. Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help." The monkey agreed. The carpet flew home. As they landed, things began to disappear. Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey, too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF...

1. Daisy had always longed to help endangered species of wildlife. One day she woke up and found a flying carpet by her bed. "Where do you want to go?" it asked. Daisy responded immediately. "I'd like to see some endangered wildlife," she said. "Please take me to a distant land where I can find the animal that gave fur to make this sweater." At once the carpet flew away and took her to Tibet. There Daisy saw an antelope looking sad. It said, "We're being killed for the wool beneath our stomachs. Our fur is being used to make sweaters for people like you. As a result, we are now an endangered species." At that Daisy cried, "I'm sorry I didn't know that. I wonder what is being done to help you. Flying carpet, please show me a place where there's some wildlife protection."

2. The flying carpet travelled so fast that next minute they were in Zimbabwe. Daisy turned around and found that she was being watched by an elephant. "Have you come to take my photo?" it asked. In relief Daisy burst into laughter. "Don't laugh," said the elephant, "We used to be an endangered species. Farmers hunted us without mercy. They said we destroyed their farms, and money from tourists only went to the large tour companies." So the government decided to help. They allowed tourists to hunt only a certain number of animals if they paid the farmers. Now the farmers are happy and our numbers are increasing. So good things are being done here to save local wildlife".

3. Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed itself. "What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

4. Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help." The monkey agreed. The carpet flew home. As they landed, things began to disappear. Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey, too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF...

Read for Details—Scene 3 (Para 3-4)

3. Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost touched Daisy when it was in a rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed it self." What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

4. Daisy was amazed "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help." The monkey agreed. The carpet flew

Place	Feeling	Supporting sentence	The situation of wildlife	Evidence
In a rainforest	amazed	①	?

Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and alighted on a tree in the rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed it self." What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin protection. Thank you very much and help." The monkey agreed. Scene III a millipede insect began to disappear.
Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey, too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF...

Read for Details—Scene 3 (Para 3-4)

潮恩教育
www.sunedu.com

Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed it self." What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

1. Your support is greatly appreciated.

2. His talents are not fully appreciated in his company.

to be grateful for sth. that sb. has done
to recognize the good quality of sb. or sth.

3. Very few people truly appreciate the beauty of this painting.

to understand or to realize

Read for Details—Scene 3 (Para 3-4)

潮恩教育
www.sunedu.com

Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed it self." What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

4. Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin to protect the rainforest." The monkey agreed. "I'll take you home in a few minutes."

later even drug. But

Another harmonious scene:

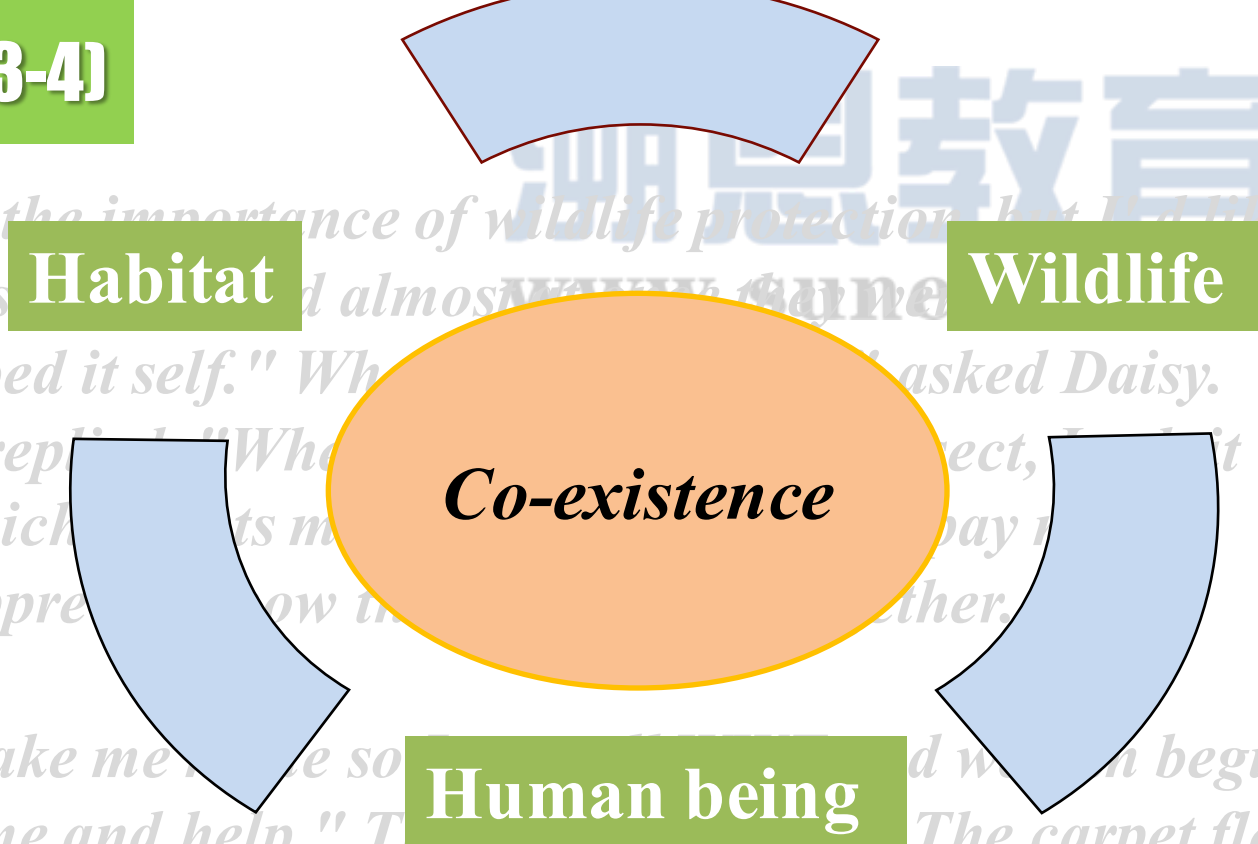

Animals live in peace / harmony with each other.

key minutes er new ys WWF...

Read for Details—Scene 3 (Para 3-4)

3. Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose and almost immediately she was in the rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed itself. "What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "What do you mean?" "I mean, I'm protecting over my body. It contains a powerful drug which keeps mosquitoes away from me. I want to draw attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals and plants live together. In the rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

4. Daisy was amazed. “Flying carpet, please take me to the so Human being and wish begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help.” The monkey agreed. The carpet flew

Place	Feeling	Supporting sentence	The situation of wildlife	Evidence
In a rainforest	amazed	①	desirable	co-existence

Read for Details—Scene 3 (Para 3-4)

Daisy smiled. "That's good news. It shows the importance of wildlife protection, but I'd like to help as the WWF suggests." The carpet rose again and almost at once they were in a thick rainforest. A monkey watched them as it rubbed it self." What are you doing?" asked Daisy. "I'm protecting myself from mosquitoes," it replied. "When I find a millipede insect, I rub it over my body. It contains a powerful drug which affects mosquitoes. You should pay more attention to the rainforest where I live and appreciate how the animals live together. No rainforest, no animals, no drugs."

Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help" The monkey agreed. The carpet flew home. As they landed, things began to disappear. Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey, too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF...

*4. Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help." The monkey agreed. The carpet flew home. As they landed, things began to disappear. Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey ,too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF..

	Feelings	Supporting sentences
After the journey	Hopeful	1. She had learned so much 2. And there was always WWF

Read for Details—Scene 3 (Para 3-4)

*Daisy was amazed. "Flying carpet, please take me home so I can tell WWF and we can begin producing this new drug. Monkey, please come and help." The monkey agreed. The carpet flew home. As they landed, things began to disappear. Two minutes later everything had gone - the monkey, too. So Daisy was not able to make her new drug. But what an experience! She had learned so much! And there was always WWF...

WWF is everywhere around us waiting to protect the wildlife. Protecting the wildlife is arduous and the way is long.

How Daisy Learned to Help Wildlife

1. Can you suggest another good title for this passage?
Give your reasons

Tips: A good title should attract readers' interests, be a good summary of the content and be innovative...

A magical journey to the wildlife

2. What can you do to protect wildlife?

Avoid eating the meat of wildlife .

Collect money to donate to WWF .

Treat the wildlife as our friends .

Introduce wildlife knowledge to others.

Organize voluntary activities .

Never buy endangered species products.

Group Work

Back from the magical journey, Daisy is being interviewed by the student journalists. Work in 4 students. One is Daisy and the other three are journalists. Each has to ask Daisy at least 1 question.

You may ask like this:

S1: Hi, Daisy, I am very interested in your magical journey. Can you tell us....? What strikes you most during your journey?

S2: Hello, Daisy, I wonder if you could give us some advice....?

S3: Daisy, so how about...?/ What do you plan to do to ...?

*Continue finishing the interview and write it into a report.
(At least 120 words)*

- 1. A brief introduction to Daisy and her journey;*
- 2. Daisy's advice or plan about wildlife protection.*

教育

edu.com

Thank you