六、应用文写作(满分 15 分)

Dear Jack,

You asked me what the future classrooms look like. Here, I'd love to introduce some amazing technological changes in my classroom.

To begin with, voice commands have replaced switches and remote controls to control the electrical appliances in the classroom, which definitely brings us great convenience. Besides, the smart classroom is able to detect litter and use a device to recycle or dispose of it, thus saving more energy. All in all, it feels quite comfortable to study in such smart classrooms.

If you have any other questions, please let me know.

Yours,

Li Hua

七、读后续写一（满分 25 分）

Then the terrible storm broke out. Lightning lit up the darkening sky, followed by another crash of thunder. A violent bump could even be felt in the cabin, which now was in total chaos. Some passengers were holding the arms of the chair tightly while some were trying to unfasten their seat belts and run for their lives. The attendants tried to assure us that we all would arrive home safely, but their voices were drowned out by the screaming of the frightened passengers. I was alarmed, too. Hands sweating and heart pumping, I forced myself to calm and began to search for the life-vest under my seat.

At the moment the girl next to me said, "I believe the storm will pass and we will all be fine." Her voice was so determined that I became less scared but more curious. She was seated there quietly, holding her picture book in her arm. When all the adults were frightened half to death, this unusual kid was completely calm and at ease. Luckily, like what she said, we finally survived the storm and reached our destination. Applause broke out in the cabin and some even hugged each other. Seized by curiosity, I turned to ask the girl why she had behaved so bravely. A smile beamed across her face. "Sir, my dad is the pilot, and my mom an attendant. They are taking me home."

部分详解

录音稿

(Text 1)

W: Who gave you my brother's number?

M: It's not a phone number; it's a bank number for Mr. Bell, one of our customers.

(Text 2)

M: Where is the Central Park, please?

W: Straight down this road, turn right — no, sorry, left, turn left, pass the hotel on the corner and you'll be there. It's next to the shop.

M: Thank you.

(Text 3)

M: You must love to travel.

W: That's why I became a travel agent. I love to meet lots of people. I don't like sitting at a desk. But I'm not in the office much.

(Text 4)

M: Oh, my Gosh. I just seem to be putting on more and more weight these days.

W: That's not good for your health. Have you ever thought of doing regular exercise?

M: No. I hear heavy people can have an operation to lose weight.

W: That sounds frightening.

(Text 5)

W: I can hardly believe it! Such a well-dressed man fired three shots into a crowded party, killing one man.

M: To be more exact, he killed one man and wounded two other people.

W: Has he already been sentenced?

M: Yes, thirty years in prison.

第二节

(Text 6)

W: Where would you like to put the TV?

M: Why don't we put it, let's see, on top of that shelf there? It's going to take both of us, OK?

W: OK. Er ... not in the middle ... maybe a little more ... Let's put it all the way to the left.

M: To the edge?

W: Yeah, that's good. How about this chair?

M: Oh, that folding chair? Set it next to my desk.

W: Here? On the left?

M: Yeah, next to my desk on the left. That's fine. Well, that is exhausting. Let's take a break, dear.
I want a cup of coffee.

(Text 7)

W: Today, we've invited an animal expert, Dr. Thompson, into the studio to tell us some important things to keep in mind before you buy a pet.

M: Well, this is very important. Think about the time that looking after your pet will take — are you sure you can and you want to spare that time? Dogs have to be exercised every day, and long-haired cats need lots of attention.

W: Now what about giving animals as presents? That happens a lot, doesn't it?

M: Yes. I would say, never give a pet as a present unless you can be a hundred percent sure that it will be wanted and loved. So many animals suffer because their owners never really wanted them in the first place.

W: Well, Dr. Thompson, thank you. We'll continue the subject at the same time tomorrow.

(Text 8)

W: Today we have Matt Ryan in our program. Matt, could I ask you to tell listeners a bit about your early career?

M: Sure. I started off in the photograph library and we had to collect pictures for the news, and it was a good way of getting into the business.

W: So how did the career come about?

M: I think it was an interesting time altogether really. It was in the 1960s and everyone was talking about going to the moon. Where I was working we had photographs which were used in television reports on the subject. The scenes fascinated me and I thought why not build some models of the views instead of these flat photos that were mostly black and white.

W: And what happened to them?

M: During one of the space trips to the moon, the camera on the spacecraft burnt out and we had no pictures back in the television studio to put on the news. So they used fifteen of my models as a substitute.

W: Do you think that marked the beginning of a career with television?

M: Yes, because shortly after that, I was asked to go to a meeting with one of the TV heads. It was a time when they were looking for more people and I think nowadays that type of thing wouldn't happen — you'd need two degrees and about six years' experience!

(Text 9)

M: Good morning, Jenny. Hey, you don't look so good. What's the matter?

W: Oh, I feel awful! I have a terrible headache, and I'm feeling really weak. And I'm sick at the stomach. And my whole body feels hot. Oh, and I'm starting to get a sore throat.

M: Well, your forehead feels really warm. You probably have a fever. Why don't you go home early? I'm sure the boss will understand.

W: Yeah, I know, but my desk will probably fill up with work while I'm out.

M: If I were you, I'd forget about work. You ought to take the day off and ... Hey! Would you like to go skiing this weekend? We could ...

W: George, please, you've got to be kidding! Oh, my head ...

(Text 10)

M: Good morning, everyone. Today I want to talk about London. Well, London is Europe's largest city, spreading across an area of more than 629 square miles from its center on the River Thames. With a population of just under eight million, it is also Europe's most diverse city: around two hundred languages are spoken in the city, and more than thirty percent of the population is made up of first-, second- and third-generation immigrants.

For the visitors London is an exciting place. Among the "A list" of London's new attractions are the London Eye, the Tate Modern and the Millennium Bridge. The London Eye, a huge observation wheel, which opened to the public in January 2000, has attracted people from around the world to come and experience the excitement of seeing London from a bird's eye view. The Tate Modern, which opened in May 2000, is the world's largest modern art gallery. And the Millennium Bridge across River Thames, which opened in February 2002, is a 330m steel bridge linking the City of London at St Paul's Cathedral with the Tate Modern Gallery at Bankside.

In the meantime, London's traditional sights — Big Ben, Westminster Abbey, Buckingham Palace, St Paul's Cathedral and the Tower of London — continue to draw in millions of tourists every year. There is also much enjoyment to be had from the city's quiet Georgian Squares, the narrow streets of the City of London, the riverside walks, and a collection of true villages nearby. And in the large areas of greenery in Hyde Park, Green Park and St James's Park are all within a few minutes' walk of the West End.
