Bryan and Ashley Buller-dick of North Carolina paid $ 25,000 to clone (克隆) their pet cat Cinnabun, who had been a part of the couple's lives since they got married in 1999. The couple first began considering taking the unusual and expensive step in 2018 , as their cat came near to her 19th birthday, after learning that singer Barbra Streisand had cloned her late dog, Samantha.

“I didn't know it was possible until I read the article,” Bryan said, adding that they were concerned about how much time they had left with her. The couple went on to buy a DNA kit (提取试剂盒) from the cloning company ViaGen Pets, which was also responsible for cloning Barbra's dog, but didn't immediately decide to follow through with it. “We kept it for months in our refrigerator while we thought about it,” Ashley shared, “Then we just thought we had to do it. Cinnabun was so dear to us. She slept next to my head on the pillow every night. If we had a chance of getting another cat like that, we had to try. ” Unfortunately, one month after the pair decided to go ahead and clone their cat, Cinnabun passed away.

Cinnabun's clone was born on February 4, and just under one month later, it was sent to the couple, who were immediately amazed by the likeness between the two cats. Ashley said, "As far as looks (外观) go, they are spot on. Even their personalities (个性) are similar. They are both energetic. Important to the couple, their new cat even shared the original Cinnabun's love of sleeping by Ashley's head every night. In fact, the two cats were so similar that the couple decided to also name their new cat Cinnabun, even though they had originally planned on naming her Bun Bun.

“We never really thought much about the cost,” Bryan, who owns a very successful business, said. “It is a lot of money but I know people who spend that on vacations all the time. This is an animal that we hope will be with us for twenty years. ” “We would definitely do it again ,” added Ashley.

- A. Because it was required by the doctor.
- B. Because it was not suitable for cloning.
- C. Because they were short of money for the cloning.
- D. Because they were uncertain about doing the cloning.

26. What does the underlined part "spot on" in Paragraph 3 mean?
- A. Recently born. B. Exactly similar.

A black bear was in a dangerous situation when she fell off a 30-meter-high bridge. After a long day in California's Sierra Nevada mountains, the bear probably thought she was taking a shortcut (捷径) home. She was walking across the bridge when, suddenly, two cars entered from both sides. There was nowhere to run, so the frightened bear jumped onto the rail and began to fall over the side.

Luckily, the bear pulled herself onto an arch (拱门) under the bridge, but she was trapped there. A driver saw the scene and called 911. Robert Brooks, an animal control officer from the nearby town of Truckee, was sent to investigate. "I thought it was a joke," he said. But it wasn't a joke, so he called Dave Baker of the BEAR League — a group that helps bears in trouble. "He thought I was playing a joke on him, too," Brooks said. Unfortunately, the sky was getting dark. They needed to rescue (营救) the bear quickly. Baker had an idea — they should hang a net (网) under the bear, push her into it, and then let her down to the ground.

Firefighters volunteered to lower the 100-kilogram bear once she was in the net. Police officers closed the road, and when the net arrived, it was hung under the bridge. Then, an animal control officer shot a dart (飞镖) with a sleeping drug (药品) into the bear's shoulder. When the bear was sleepy, Ann Bryant, head of the BEAR League shouted, "OK, push!" A volunteer rock climber used his feet to push the bear off the arch, right into the middle of the net.

The bear was gently lowered to the ground. When she touched the ground, everyone cheered.

Bryant and Brooks guided the sleepy bear to a river, where she could finally get a drink. The rescuers then cleared all the people from the area and left the bear alone so she could sleep. Since then, no one has seen her. "I don't think she's going near that bridge anymore," Brooks said.

28. Why did the bear jump onto the rail?
- A. To find delicious food. B. To take a shortcut home.
C. To walk across the bridge. D. To escape the moving cars.
29. How did Dave Baker find the news from Brooks?
- A. Unsatisfying. B. Unbelievable. C. Frightening. D. Awkward.
30. What did the officer do before the bear was pushed into the net?
- A. He put the bear to sleep. B. He forced the bear off the arch.
C. He let the bear drink some water. D. He let the bear down to the ground.
31. What's the purpose of the text?
- A. To tell a story. B. To introduce black bears.
C. To show a terrible road accident. D. To ask readers to keep away from bears.

D

Suppose you were promised $ 1,440 each day for your entire life, and that could never be reduced or changed as long as you live. Sounds great, doesn't it?

Actually, we all do get 1,440 a day — but in minutes, not dollars. Time is our most valuable and limited (有限的) resource, says Steve Booren, founder of Prosperion Financial Advisors.

It's possible to get more money, but you can't make more time. We can't add a single second to our daily allotment(份额), nor can we stop it or bring back time we've let pass by. That makes time even more valuable than money, according to Booren. The question is, he says, are you a good manager of your time?

Find out where your time is going now. Write down everything you do in a day including work, cooking and meals, sleep, and mindless activities such as getting lost in social media. Tracking (跟踪) is the most important step, says Corie Clark, founder of the Purposeful Planner. "Take an assessment (评估) of where you're already spending your time, just like you would if you needed to sit down and look at your money," he says.

Invest (投资) a few minutes at the beginning of each day or week to plan and organize. Ten minutes of planning can save you an hour of time and helps increase the time you have. Clark says, "Don't let people come into your time wallet and steal it because when they take your time, they've stolen something from you that you can't get back." "Invest the first 10 or 20 percent of your time in taking care of yourself," Clark advises. "Make sure you're getting enough sleep and taking care of yourself first, so that you have that extra time and energy as the day goes on."

Once you take charge of your own 1,440 daily minutes and invest your time well, you'll know how to answer when someone asks, "Got a minute?"

32. Why does the author compare time with money?

- A. To show time is more valuable.
- B. To call on people to be on time.
- C. To advise people to save money.
- D. To prove making money takes time.

33. What can you do if you want to know where your time is going?

- A. Turn to social media.
- B. Listen to people around you.
- C. List whatever you do in a day.
- D. Be a member of the Purposeful Planner.

34. What does Clark suggest people do in Paragraph 5?

- A. Put health first.
- B. Waste less time.
- C. Sleep as much as possible.
- D. Work extra hours every day.

35. Which of the following can be the best title for the text?

- A. Find out where your time is going
- B. Earn more money to get more time
- C. Make the most of your valuable time
- D. Refuse others' invitations to save time

Five keys to happiness

Self

Your self includes your education, your health and your sense of purpose — the feeling that you are doing something important. It's important to take care of yourself. First, find a hobby. 36 You can also volunteer. Volunteering takes the focus off your own problems and makes you feel thankful for what you have.

Home

37 Create a quiet, dark area where you can sit and relax. Paint your living room yellow ----it can increase energy and improve feelings. It also helps to own a pet. Pets can increase their owners' self-esteem, make them feel calm, and provide love and friendship.

Financial life

This is the way you think about and spend money. According to an expert, the key to greater well-being is to have money, but not to want it too much. 38 Try not to waste money. Buy things that will really enrich your life, such as music lessons and dinners with friends and family.

Social life

39 Have friends that encourage you to eat right, to be active, to laugh, and to do your best. Researchers have found that having a close, happy friend can raise a person's mood by nine percent, while each unhappy friend lowers it by seven percent.

Workplace

Your office, or wherever you spend your working hours, is a big part of your life. So it should be a place that you like. 40 You don't want to spend 40 hours a week with people that you dislike. And do something that you feel strongly about. That's more important than a big salary.

- A. It's important to have a good group of friends.
- B. Find a job with people that you enjoy being around.
- C. How you organize your home can make you happier.
- D. The place where you live is probably more comfortable.
- E. Try to spend money on things that give you long-lasting pleasure.
- F. Walking makes you healthier, and healthier people are happier people.
- G. This gives you a chance to spend time focusing on your interests and gifts.
