There are two tragedies in life. One is to lose your heart's desire. The other is to gain it. (by George Bernard Shaw)

即学即用

April Fools' Day, which falls on April 1st, has been celebrated for several centuries by different cultures. On this day, people do not need to dress up like they do on Halloween, nor do they need to parade on the street day and night. It is a day when people play a trick on each other and they need not apologize for it. The simplest jokes may involve children who tell each other that their shoelaces are undone and then cry out "April Fool!". The origin of April Fools' Day probably points to the introduction of the Gregorian calendar in the 16th century. People who forgot about the change or followed the old rules were fooled by others. Through centuries, people have gained a lot of fun from the day.
