参考范文

Dear Mr Ryan,

I'm Li Hua. Having experienced the annual "English Week", I'm writing to give my feedback and provide some suggestions.

Admirably, with such a great diversity of activities, ranging from English dubbing competition to talent show, many students extinguished themselves with a high level of English competence. Besides, the carefully selected prizes for the winners literally amazed everyone present. However, I have noticed that there are some students who are unable to participate in any of the activities. Thus, I think it would be better if there could be some activities less competitive or of pure fun, allowing everyone an opportunity to get involved, such as English corner and appreciating English movies.

Your consideration of my suggestions will be highly appreciated. Wish the event a greater success next year.

Yours,
Li Hua

参考范文

Finally, we presented Missy's father with the car and the inquire began. Under a barrage of inquiries, Missy recapped her concocted story unhurriedly, while I stood there in silent agreement. After Missy finishing her seemingly perfect statement, her father raised his eyebrows and turned to me, waiting for my proof. However, once again, I chose silence under his scrutinizing eyes with my heart pounding violently. Suddenly, he walked over to the dented area for a closer inspection. It was at that point that pieces of bark from the tree that Missy had hit fell out.

Her father looked at me with great disbelief. An enormous sense of guilt rose up in me as his cold eyes seemed to proclaim me as the “guilty” bystander. I was so flustered that I wanted to explain but was interrupted by his harsh words, “You guys really failed me! Especially...” Instead of continuing his reproach, he took a deep breath and turned his back on me. It dawned on me that the precious but fragile trust had been smashed by my silence. In fact, the process of how we apologized to make amends was just a blur, but the bitter lesson of being a silent accomplice was branded on my memory.

W: Great! (3)

Text 4

W: Now I see.

M: We've spoken at many schools to teach the youth about farming. And we offer a volunteer program for students every year.

W: For those who are interested in food production, this program might be perfect for you.

M: But to all students here, we hope to explain the importance of farming.

feed over 150 people. Plus, over 97% of American farms are owned by families, including ours. (11)

M: That is what many don't know about agriculture. So, we offer this brief speech and presentation to explain aspects of farming that many don't understand.

W: We also bring some fruits and vegetables from our farm for everyone to try. (11)

M: But first, I'd like to show this quick movie to introduce our farm. (12)

M: You must have left right after our final day of school in June. (15)

W: Exactly, (15) then we have been away for almost two months. My relatives are living in Shanghai and Beijing because of work, so we visited both cities. They treated us so well. It was such a warm welcome!

M: China is a country with a long history. Did you go to any museums or historical sites? (16)

W: No, we only visit the main tourist sites in the cities. I wish we could have seen more beautiful views and museums. We'll visit more next time.

M: The museums and the ancient art would have been the most exciting thing for me. (16) I'd love to see your pictures!

W: Sure! But it's almost time for class — see you later, Will! (13)

Text 10

(17) I was so busy messaging on my phone that I didn't see the old man until I'd walked into him. (18) The old man fell to the ground. I apologized and helped him up. He said that young people like me were always so focused on our phones, and we never stopped to see the world around us. And then I realized that the old man had been giving a tour to a group of tourists, who were all standing watching me. Instead of getting angry, the old man invited me to join his tour. (19) I explained that I was in a hurry to meet some friends. (17) "It's your loss," he said. I got curious, so I messaged my friends to say I'd be late and joined the tour. (17) Then I listened as the old man spoke about the building in front of us, learning all about its history. (19) I had walked by the building hundreds of times, but I did not know anything about it. I learned more about my city on that afternoon than I had in the 18 months I had lived there. (20)
