We all love animals, but animals don't feel the same way about us. When we enter their wild world, we are "unnatural" invaders into their homes.

There was a video many of you may have seen on the internet recently of a bear and its cub (幼崽) climbing up a steep, snow-covered hill in Russia. The mama bear makes it to the top without too much trouble, but the baby bear keeps sliding back down. It takes three attempts to reach the top and, no doubt, many cheered at the cub's never-give-up spirit. But nature scientists who saw the video didn't cheer.

Instead, the scientists were upset that the two bears had been frightened into making a dangerous, unnecessary climb by the drone that was filming them. Sophie Gilbert of the University of Idaho said, "It showed a complete lack of understanding from the drone operator of the effects his actions were having on the bears." Other scientists have found that when a drone is hovering near, a bear's heart rate can increase from 41 beats per minute to 162 beats per minute—a high enough rate to cause a heart attack.

Human disturbance has actually been having a far-reaching influence on wildlife. Researchers at the University of Berkeley recently found that many mammals are turning into "night owls" again to avoid contact with humans. Such a shift might not only affect those species themselves, but also have numerous chain effects.

We human beings find ourselves in a strange position in nature. We are part of it but also separate from it, now more than ever, since most of us live in cities. So, when we go off hiking into wild areas to "re-connect" with nature, we should go softly and considerately. It's OK to get close to our animal friends, just not too close—we wouldn't want to scare them, would we?

24. What does the video feature?

- A. The baby bear's climbing.
- B. The mama bear's care.
- C. The dangerous environment.
- D. The experiment by scientists.

25. Why didn't nature scientists cheer?

- A. They knew the bear's family well.
- B. They were against other scientists.
- C. They knew the cause of the bears' climbing.
- D. They lacked understanding of the drone operator.

26. What may be the effect of human disturbance on wildlife?

- A. Food shortage.
- B. Changing habitats.
- C. Ecological imbalance.
- D. Less contact with humans.

27. What does the author seem to agree with?

- A. Lose connection with nature.
- B. Tighten the bond with wild animals.
- C. Respect the human-animal distance.
- D. Shoot more videos on animals for study.

More than a third of small towns in Georgia lost population in the last year alone, highlighting the challenges of reviving rural areas. New census (人口普查) estimates show that Camilla fell below 5,000 residents. Sparks fell below 2,000, and Milan fell to 661 residents for a loss of 7% of its population. All three towns are in South Georgia. "

Many of the young people in these communities graduate from high school and don't come back. They go to college, whatever, they don't come back," said David Bridges, head of its Center for Rural Prosperity and Innovation in Tifton.

Meanwhile, Georgia's cities are growing, having no problem drawing people from small towns and other cities. Atlanta grew more than 1% in the past year and is now nearing the half-million-resident mark.

The trend of people moving from rural to urban areas is hardly a new one—it's been going on worldwide for more than a century. But continued population losses have raised questions about whether rural areas can do anything to reverse the tide.

Rural residents can face a number of challenges including access to good jobs, transportation and health care. Manufacturing jobs have dried up in many places, while modernization and new technology means fewer people are needed for farming. And many people are deciding to have smaller families than was typical a century ago.

"The older generation is dying, the younger generation is moving away, and because there are perceived to be fewer business opportunities, financial opportunities, etc., it's very challenging to get inbound population," Bridges said.

Demographers(人口学家) expect the shift from rural to urban to continue. But there are some bright spots in rural America still. Jackson County near Athens was recently named one of the fastest-growing counties in the nation by the Census Bureau. Amazon opened a large fulfillment center there a couple of years ago. And Young Harris, near the Georgia-North Carolina border, has grown by more than 80% since 2010.

28. What happened to the small towns mentioned in paragraph 1?

- A. Their sizes grew rapidly.
- B. Their population declined.
- C. They drew more residents.
- D. They raised challenges to locals.

29. Which of the following best explains "reverse the tide" underlined in paragraph 4?

- A. People move from rural to urban areas.
- B. Small towns draw people from cities.
- C. Rural areas develop their economy quickly.
- D. Population continues to grow in urban areas.

30. Why is David Bridges quoted?

- B. To offer more evidence.
- A. To draw a conclusion.
- C. To show his contribution.

D.To give part of the reasons.

31.What can be inferred from the last paragraph?

A.Jackson County is the best town in the US.

B.Rural towns will keep growing to larger ones.

C.Others will follow the lead of these bright spots.

D.There can be measures to help rural towns grow.

I recall when I was a young girl back in Canada.I was sitting and watching a baseball game on TV with my father and we started to debate the importance of sports.Different from my father,I argued with all the overconfidence of a teenager that sports is more than just a hobby to keep us physically healthy and went as far as claiming that"There would be more wars if we didn't have sports!"

As an adult,my teenage tendencies of exaggeration(夸张) may have faded but I still firmly believe that sports is more than just a hobby for both participants and audience.The challenging times we are all living through right now with coronavirus is proof to this.The effect of cancelling all sports from professional leagues right down to amateur budding athletic programs,can be felt by millions of people worldwide.To many the social emotional impact is stronger than the physical.The loss of the sense of community,of belonging,and of an extended family is real for many girls,boys,men and women everywhere.Others are feeling physical challenges as well as they are struggling to stay active during these times.

But the human race is incredible and adaptable in tough situations,and sports once again is playing a role.Sports teams are staying in touch online and are a source of much needed support,love and laughter in these times.So many professional athletes are playing vital roles through this crisis by sharing their messages of support and at times,making valuable monetary donations to the cause.Even in areas of isolation(隔离) , people are coming out on their balconies and leading their neighbours through a workout programme to help them stay active.Others are turning to online workout programmes to follow.Once again,sports is finding its way.

So,in challenging times such as now,people are still empowered to continue their sports journey and stay strong and healthy.

32.What may the author's father agree about sports?

A.It is a personal hobby.

B.It boosts confidence.

C.It affects social relations.

D.It helps avoid wars.

33.How does life without sports affect people?

- A.They lack family connection.
- B.They have lost their hobbies.
- C.They feel bored more than lonely.
- D. They suffer both in body and mind.

34. How do isolated people respond to the tough situations?

- A.Struggle to be athletes.
- B.Try to stay physically active.
- C.Make donations to good causes.
- D.Design new sports programmes.

35.What is the best title?

- A.Sports reduces risks in our lives
- B. Sports continues to offer strength
- C.Sports makes the impossible possible
- D.Sports has new functions in the pandemic

第二节（共 5 小题；每小题 2.5 分，满分 12.5 分）

阅读下面短文，从短文后的选项中选出可以填入空白处的最佳选项。选项中有两项为多余选项。

Until recently scientific evidence for a link between employee well-being and company performance has been scarce.In the new IZA World of Labor report,Dr. Eugenio Proto,of the University of Warwick's Department of Economics,gives some proof. 36 Finding causal relations between employee well-being and company performance is important for firms to justify spending corporate resources to provide a happier work environment for their employees.

37 Dr.Proto cites a number of researches that uncovered evidence that happiness leads to greater creativity,and that job satisfaction is positively related with worker productivity.38 These can be defined as people who frequently experience positive emotions like joy,satisfaction,contentment,enthusiasm,and interest.For example,adolescent Americans who are"happier"end up with higher incomes several years later in life.

39 First,if happiness in a workplace carries with it a return in terms of enhanced productivity,there are enormous implications for firms' promotion policies and for the way they structure their internal labour markets.For example,managers could be rewarded on the basis of employees' job satisfaction.Second, Proto suggests a win-win situation for everyone.The effect running from happiness to productivity raises the possibility of self-reinforcing spirals-ones that might even operate at a macroeconomic level.Happiness might lead to greater productivity in an economy. 40

- A.The conclusions are contrary to what most people think.

- B.However,few companies are willing to invest in this aspect.
- C.In turn,greater well-being in the population can be expected.
- D.These findings have some implications for company practice.
- E. Therefore,policies can be introduced to boost staff happiness.
- F.Other studies show happy people are more likely to succeed in their career.
- G.He notes there is a positive connection between happiness and productivity.

第二节 (满分 25 分)

阅读下面材料, 根据其内容和所给段落开头语续写两段, 使之构成一篇完整的短文。

At six years old, I dreamed of becoming an artist. My mom knew this, so she gave the perfect gift to a first-grade artist like me. My friends and I called them "Stampy Markers." They quickly became my treasure.

Unfortunately, my little sister thought they were amazing, too. For three days in a row, she would ask to play with my markers. However, each time, she would receive my firm "No." Finally, maybe realizing it is impossible to take them from me, she stopped asking. And I was able to leave them out in my room when I went to school, certain that she understood they were forbidden to her.

The first day that I didn't hide them, I got home from school and went upstairs to my room. Right away, I saw that my markers were not where I had left them. My rainbow-colored treasures were gone!

Suspecting that my sister might have something to do with their disappearance, I searched the entire house for her. Finally, I found her in the basement and, sure enough, she was working on some rainbow drawing with my markers surrounding her.

"Hey! Why did you take them while I was away?" I started yelling at her.

"Sorry...but I..." she murmured.

Before she could make any explanation, I grabbed the markers—at least the ones I could reach—and ran back up to my room, slamming the door shut behind me. I sat there for at least half an hour but it seemed like much longer. Then, I heard my sister's footsteps coming up the stairs.

I opened my mouth, about to demand that she give the rest of my markers back, when I noticed a folded piece of paper being pushed underneath the door.

Once it reached my side of the door, I picked it up. As I read the words written on the cover, my anger quickly fell away, and tears began to well up in my eyes. Then they began running down my cheeks.

注意:

- 1.续写词数应为 150 左右;
- 2.请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

What was on the paper was something that I would never forget.

Text 1

W: I want some free study materials to prepare for the college entrance test. Can I get some at the bookstore?

M: Why not visit the College Board website? It offers free study materials, including practice tests.

Text 2

M: How was your trip to London?

W: It was fantastic. I visited a lot of places, churches, museums and the royal palaces, and the weather was fine. Horrible traffic, though.

Text 3

M: Jennifer, do you know what the average score of the SAT nationwide in 2018 was?

W: Yes. I remember it was 1068.

M: In 2019, the average score dropped 9 scores.

Text 4

W: Mark, this report said that mountain lions in southern California were at risk of disappearing within 50 years.

M: Really? I'm so sad to hear that. I do hope action will be taken to help rescue them. This species is very important to us.

Text 5

W: James, do you know what happened to the Jazzland Six Flags Theme Park in New Orleans?

M: It closed forever after being destroyed by Hurricane Katrina in 2005. It opened just in 2000.

W: It had a really short life.

Text 6

W: Mike, what's your favorite movie?

M: It's Imitation of Life. My dad and his mom loved watching this movie when my dad was a teenager.

W: So it's a very old movie.

M: You're right.

W: So did they recommend the movie to you?

M: No. My mom showed me this movie when I was in high school. I really loved watching it. When I talked about this movie with my dad, he told me he and his mother also loved watching it very much. So what's your favorite movie?

W: Mamma Mia. Every time I watch this movie, I love singing the songs along with the roles.

M: Mum, I don't feel too well today.

W: Oh dear. Tell me what is wrong.

M: I have a dry throat and my head hurts. My ears ache, too.

W: Did you sleep with the air conditioner on again?

M: No. I just slept with the window open the whole night.

W: Oh, that's it. You must have a cold. Let me see. Hmm, your head feels hot. I think you had better stay home today, and I will make an appointment with Dr. White. His clinic is near our home. Hopefully, Dr. White's clinic has a free appointment.

M: Oh no! I'm afraid I have no time to see the doctor. I have an important test today. I can't miss it, Mum. And it's Clara's birthday tomorrow. I promised to go tomorrow!

W: Have you ever experienced anything horrible, David?

M: Not really. But something horrible once happened to my elder brother. It was May 23, 2006. My brother had just been swimming. He was on his way from his home in Hastings to work. It was raining hard and the wind was strong. And the visibility was terrible. He was crossing the road when a white van drove into him and he fell.

W: He must have got seriously injured.

M: You bet. The van hit the side of his head and he rolled under a parked car. He lost his consciousness and was taken to hospital.

W: How long did he stay in hospital?

M: You may not believe it, but he didn't wake up for four years at the hospital. When he finally woke up, he didn't remember anything.

W: Really? Wait, it's just one of the stories written by you, right? You make a living out of writing.

M: It's true I write. But this is something that has truly happened.

W: Oh, I'm so sorry to hear that. That's really horrible!

M: Amy, how was your past three days?

W: It was busy. I had planned to go to watch the latest film with my friends, but I was asked to act in a short film instead.

M: Really? That's exciting. So have you finished shooting it?

W: Yes. That's why I was so busy. On Friday we filmed two scenes. The crew was called at 6:00 pm and the actor was called at 7:30 pm. We finished filming those scenes around 11:00 pm.

M: That was a bit late.

W: Yes. But the following day was much busier. The crew was called at 10:00 am, and the actor was called at noon. I went from working at Starbucks from 7:00 am to 11:00 am, and went straight to set to get ready. We then worked until about 6:00 pm, and then packed up.

M: What about the last day?

W: On Sunday, the crew was called at 6:00 am, and the actor was called at 7:30 am. We had to be completely packed up from our location by 10:45 am. We filmed everything just in time.

M: Good. Please tell me if you are asked to do that again. I also want such an opportunity.

W: OK.

W: Good evening, everyone. In tonight's program, let's learn something about Wilma Rudolph. She was one of the most celebrated female athletes of all time. Wilma Rudolph weighed only 4.5 pounds when she was born. The doctor doubted she would survive. She developed two severe diseases as a child and was disabled for most of her childhood. Wilma didn't start school until she was eight. When she was in the eighth grade, Wilma Rudolph's sister made the track team at Burt High School, but Wilma didn't. Her father told the coach that the Rudolph sisters were a "package deal"—either both girls made the team, or neither girls made the team. Wilma thus made the team, and began to develop her track skills.

A few years later, Wilma participated in a track meet at Tuskegee Institute, where she lost every single race. But Track Coach Ed Temple of Tennessee State University saw her that day and thought she had potential. He admitted her to his summer "track camps" at Tennessee State University. Only a year later, at the age of 16, Wilma Rudolph won a bronze medal at the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, Australia. Wilma Rudolph was now a hero in her hometown of Clarksville. But she was not satisfied with a bronze medal...

To know more about Wilma Rudolph, please wait for our program at the same time tomorrow night.
