【附：听力文字稿】

Text 1:

W: Hey, it's eight o'clock in the morning. Where are you going so early?

M: I want to go to Trader Joe's before the crowds get there. Their everyday low prices always attract a ton of folks on the weekend.

Text 2:

M: Wow, I love how they made this theatre look like a living room! Look at all the couches and chairs.

W: Yeah! Look, they even provide blankets. You can also order food during the movie by pressing this red button.

Text 3:

W: Can I have one of these phone cards behind you as well, please?

M: Sure. But I need to see your ID for the beer.

W: What? Ha-ha! Young man, I'm probably 20 years older than you. You know what? You just made my day. This is the best thing that has happened to me this week!

Text 4:

M: Could you drive a little faster, honey? I appreciate you giving me a ride, but I'm going to be late to my office if we don't hurry up.

W: I'm going as fast as I can. Next time, you should take a taxi so you can complain about all you want!

Text 5:

W: Bradley, this coffee tastes a little strange. What did you put in it?

M: It's actually what I didn't put in it, Rachel! We consume way too much sweet stuff these days. It's time for us to get back to natural flavors. Don't you think?

Text 6:

M: I'm calling because I got a flat tire and my car needs to be taken to an auto shop.

W: Are you in a safe area? And will you be waiting in your car or somewhere else?

M: Yes, I am safe. I will be waiting outside the car on the side of the road.

W: Where are you located?

M: I'm on the side of the freeway entrance near Melvin Street and 4th Street, across from 9th Avenue.

W: Can your car start?

M: Yes, the car itself is fine.

W: It looks like we have a service provider in your area. He should be able to reach you in about 30 minutes.

M: That's good to hear.

W: All right. Thank you for calling USAA. If you need anything, don't hesitate to call back. Again, a service provider should be to you in 30 minutes or less.

Text 7:

W: You just dropped your phone into the toilet!

M: Oh, no! It's not turning back on. What should I do?

W: Well, you should not try to text and brush your teeth at the same time. This was going to happen sooner or later. Dad is going to be so angry.

W: Yeah, I know. I have to find a way to fix it. Do you have any suggestions?

W: Well, my friend Craig dropped his phone in the kitchen sink. And he said that you are supposed to put it in a bag of rice and let it sit there for a little while.

M: How long? A few minutes? A few hours?

W: Uh, I think he said a few days.

M: What? I can't be without a phone for that long. What am I supposed to tell my friends? And besides, mom and dad will know something is up if they don't see me taking pictures and posting things online.

W: Well, you could try opening your phone up and using my hair dryer on the lowest setting.

M: Do you think that will work?

W: I have no idea, but you'd better start trying something fast. I think Dad just pulled into the garage.

Text 8:

M: I'd like to send this package to New Zealand.

W: Okay. But we have to ask you to declare what's inside for safety reasons.

M: Well, there is nothing dangerous. It's just some snacks and bath items.

W: Okay. Would you like regular delivery, rush delivery or overnight delivery?

M: The package is for my daughter. It's not necessarily urgent, but she misses American food and American products. I guess I will do rush delivery. How long will that take?

W: Usually, four to five days. Regular mail can take up to two or three weeks. So rush delivery is a good choice.

M: I sent a package to my mom in Australia last year, and it took over a month to get to its destination.

W: Yes, overseas shipping can take a long time sometimes. It can take up to two months to get to some places in Africa. I tried to send a Christmas present to my brother in Kenya last year, and it didn't get there until Valentine's Day.

Text 9:

W: I'm finished with all my college applications. I just emailed the final one last night.

M: Congratulations! Maybe we should celebrate!

W: Err... It's probably a little too early for champagne.

M: What do you mean? It's nine o'clock on Friday night. It's the perfect time for champagne.

W: No, I mean, I haven't gotten in anywhere yet, so I don't have anything to celebrate yet.

M: Oh...well, I went out to dinner with my parents last month when I finished my college applications. I received a letter from one of the schools I applied to and I got all excited. But they just said that they had received my application and would let me know soon.

W: Oh, that's so terrible!

M: My older brother told me last week that if the envelope is thick, that's a good sign. It means there are some forms for you to fill out because you've been accepted.

W: But if it is thin, it means you did not get in?

M: Most of the time, that's the case. Some schools will tell you that you are on a waiting list, and if so, it's usually on one piece of paper. But to me, that would still be like not getting into a school.

Text 10:

Good evening everyone. I'm so pleased to stand before you today. It honestly never crossed my mind that I'd win the National Book Award, but here I am. You know, as I was writing The Sun Turns, I was worried that I would never finish it. And if I did finish it, I thought it would never be read with the kind of careful attention I have always paid to my favorite authors' books. Not only did I finish the book, but those who have read it have proven to be some of the most intelligent readers I have ever met. I don't know all of you, but you have truly honoured me with your thoughtful comments. Thank you. It took me 10 years to write this book. My editor took another two years to make it perfect. Finally, after 13 years, it's out in the world! Thank you to Warehouse Eight for publishing this book. Without your guidance and support, I wouldn't be standing up here today. I want to thank my husband for his careful reading of my first and second drafts as well as for being there for me as I was sending the book out. Thank you to my brother who stood by me when I was short-tempered from writing throughout the night on little sleep. And thank you to my mother for providing me with so many home-cooked meals and for raising me with a love of literature.
