第四部分 写作(共两节,满分 35 分)

第一节 应用文(满分 15 分)

Dear Tom,

Hearing that you will come to China, I'd like to extend my warmest welcome.

Body language varies from culture to culture. For instance, when talking to the elderly in China, we usually look down to avoid eye contact as a sign of respect. On the other hand, some gestures have the same meaning. We favour shaking hands, smiling or nodding the head to greet someone, just as you do.

I hope my introduction can be helpful to you. Wish you a good journey.

Yours,
Li Hua

第二节 读后续写(满分 20 分)

One possible version:

However, I grew upset as I couldn't afford a gift. It would be embarrassing to be present without a gift, but her insistence put me in a dilemma. Ultimately, I accepted her invitation against my will. I was wondering what to do when the values my parents taught me flashed across my mind. "Why not make a gift by myself?" I made a toy with materials on hand and put it into a box. Finally, the big day came.

When she opened the gift box, my heart missed a beat. On seeing the toy, the boys and girls froze with surprise and then burst into laughter. I lowered my head in shame, tears streaming down my cheeks. At this moment, Julie came over and hugged me tightly, saying it was the best gift that she had ever received. I brightened up at her words and was fully aware that money couldn't buy everything. It was our friendship that really mattered. I would cherish this moment forever.
