One possible version:

Dear Charles,

It was a great pity that you couldn't visit the wildlife park with me last Saturday. Now I'm writing to tell you something about my trip.

I had a great time in the park. Sitting on a sightseeing car, I saw some large and dangerous animals such as lions and tigers. I couldn't believe how close I was to those animals. I also visited the exhibition on the protection of endangered animals. The trip is more than just fun. It is a chance to learn about some incredible animals.

When we have a chance, let's tour it together.

Yours,
Li Hua

One possible version:

I suddenly realized I should not be at the end! So scared was I that my heart jumped to my mouth. "Calm down," I told myself. I quickly found I had skipped a huge part. How could I get smoothly back and fill in the missing part? I couldn't figure a bridge fast enough. So I hit the coda, making it fade, and just stopped playing. At least I had the presence of mind to smile at the camera before its red light went off. Finally I received a certificate of participation.

I waited for the bus and thought about it all. If only I hadn't made that mistake! I was feeling upset and disappointed when my phone rang. It was from my father, who had seen me on TV. "Your movement was smooth," he said comfortingly. "All in all, a worthwhile experience." Instantly, my disappointment gave way to relief. I had a flash realization. I got some self-knowledge from the experience on Talent Sprouts. But I also got more than I would have from perfect playing or winning the competition.

(Text 1)

M: Hey Sally, do you have a spare tennis ball? We lost ours during lunch break at school.

W: Sure Tim! I'll get one from my room and be out to play in about 20 minutes, if that's okay?

M: Perfect, thanks.

(Text 2)

W: Did you see the headlines in today's paper?

M: No, I didn't. Did anything serious happen?

W: Yes, another large company in town went out of business.

M: That's terrible.

(Text 3)

M: I'd like to check out these books.

W: May I see your card?

M: Here. How long can I keep them?

W: Three weeks. You can even renew them over the phone.

(Text 4)

M: Jane! Hanna just broke the chair and the guests are due to arrive in 3 hours. Do you know how to fix it?

W: I'm really sorry but I have no idea; I don't even have any tools. As for chairs, there are several more in the garden though. Hopefully one of those will be okay.

(Text 5)

M: Anna, be careful with your coffee!

W: Ouch, sorry David! I didn't mean to drop it on your carpet, but I burnt my hand.

M: Don't worry. Are you okay?

W: Yeah, I should be okay ... I'll get a cloth.

(Text 6)

W: What do you fancy doing this weekend?

M: We could go to the cinema, but the beach is only an hour away.

W: Well, if all three of us watch a movie, it'll probably cost around £40.

M: Hmm, that's probably a bit much. If we go to the beach, we'll only have to pay £8 for parking.

W: Okay, that sounds good. Do you know what the weather will be like?

M: It looks like it'll be sunny and warm, maybe a little cloudy too.

W: Fantastic, I can't wait!

(Text 7)

M: Excuse me. I'd like to purchase a book called The Far East for my history class.

W: Okay. Let me check our database. Well, I've found two different books with the same title. One is written by Julia Simpson and the other is by Sam Cook. Which one are you looking for?

M: I'd like the one by Sam Cook. How much is it?

W: It costs $30. You can pay either by cash or by check. We can't accept credit cards right now because our credit card machine is currently not working.

(Text 8)

W: Hey Sam, how was the Big Tune concert?

M: It was great, Stacy. They played all the hits!

W: Awesome, did they play The Day Is Here?

M: Yeah, it was great. They waited until the end and the crowd went wild!

W: Wow, I wish I were there. I'm going to have to see them on their next tour, in the summer. Did you get their latest CD?

M: No, I didn't need to. I already had it. I did get this T-shirt though, look!

W: That's so cool, I love what they did with the logo.

M: You can have it if you want.

W: Wow, Sam! Really? Thanks so much!

(Text 9)

M: Amy, did you study foreign languages at secondary school?

W: Yes, I did.

M: Which ones did you study?

W: Well, I did French for three years, then I did German for four years, and I studied Spanish for a year during my lunch break.

M: And how much French can you remember?

W: Not much!

M: Well, I've just read this article about the state of language learning in schools in the UK, and it isn't looking good. It says that adults only remember about few words from the languages they studied at school.

W: So, what happens when people are abroad? Do they practice the language?

M: Not at all. The article suggests that people often choose not to go on holiday to countries where they have to worry about language problems.

W: That's probably because they're too lazy to learn a language.

M: No. The article says it's because they're too embarrassed to try and speak it.

W: OK. So which languages do students study at school today?

M: There's a list here. It says 65% of students study French, 25% study German, 22% Spanish, and 2% Italian.

W: And what are schools going to do about the problem?

M: Well, first of all, they're going to introduce language classes for children in primary schools. And then they're going to start offering languages from outside Europe.

(Text 10)

W: And our final story on tonight's programme is about an Australian diver who has survived a shark attack. 46-year-old Eric Nerhus was under the water at the time, and he didn't see a great white shark swimming towards him. Mr. Nerhus's head, shoulders, and one of his arms ended up in the shark's mouth, but, fortunately, he was wearing a heavy metal jacket. When the shark tried to bite the man in half, its teeth hit the jacket and not his body. Mr. Nerhus knew he had to do something, so he felt for the shark's eye with the hand of his other arm. When he found it, he surprised the animal by pressing his fingers into its eye. The shark reacted by opening its mouth, giving Mr. Nerhus a chance to escape. Despite his injuries, Eric managed to swim up to the surface of the water. His son pulled him onto his boat, and took him quickly to the shore. Meanwhile, another friend called the emergency services. Mr. Nerhus was flown to hospital by helicopter. He had deep cuts all over his body and a broken nose, but he was very lucky to be alive. Attacks by great white sharks usually result in death because of their size and strength. The shark that attacked Mr. Nerhus was over three meters long.
