

Why Do We Laugh?

Read for the writing style

- A. An exposition
- B. An argumentation
- C. A narration

- 1. Explain a phenomenon or objective things by using examples, facts, lists etc. instead of opinions.*
- 2. Enable people to acquire relevant knowledge.*

Para.1:

When was the last time you laughed hard, really hard? Can you remember a time when you couldn't stop laughing? Babies first laugh when they are three and a half or four months old. The age people laugh the most is five or six. Maybe you remember a time from this age. What was so funny? While people often tell a joke to be funny, research shows people most often laugh at things that aren't so funny. For example, people laugh at simple statements that people use to begin a conversation—for example, “Here comes Hasid.” Questions like “How did you do on your test?” can also cause laughter. This shows people laugh to be social. They want to make a connection with other people. In addition, this is why babies laugh...We laugh to be heard. We laugh to feel happiness and share it with others.

Para.1:

although; despite the fact that.

When was the last time you laughed hard, really hard? Can you remember a time when you couldn't stop laughing? Babies first laugh when they are three and a half or four months old. The age people laugh the most is five or six. Maybe you remember a time from this age. What was so funny? While people often tell a joke to be funny, research shows people most often laugh at things that aren't so funny. For example, people laugh at simple statements that people use to begin a conversation—for example, “Here comes Hasid.” Questions like “How did you do on your test?” can also cause laughter. This shows people laugh to be social. They want to make a connection with other people. In addition, this is why babies laugh...We laugh to be heard. We laugh to feel happiness and share it with others.

Para.1:

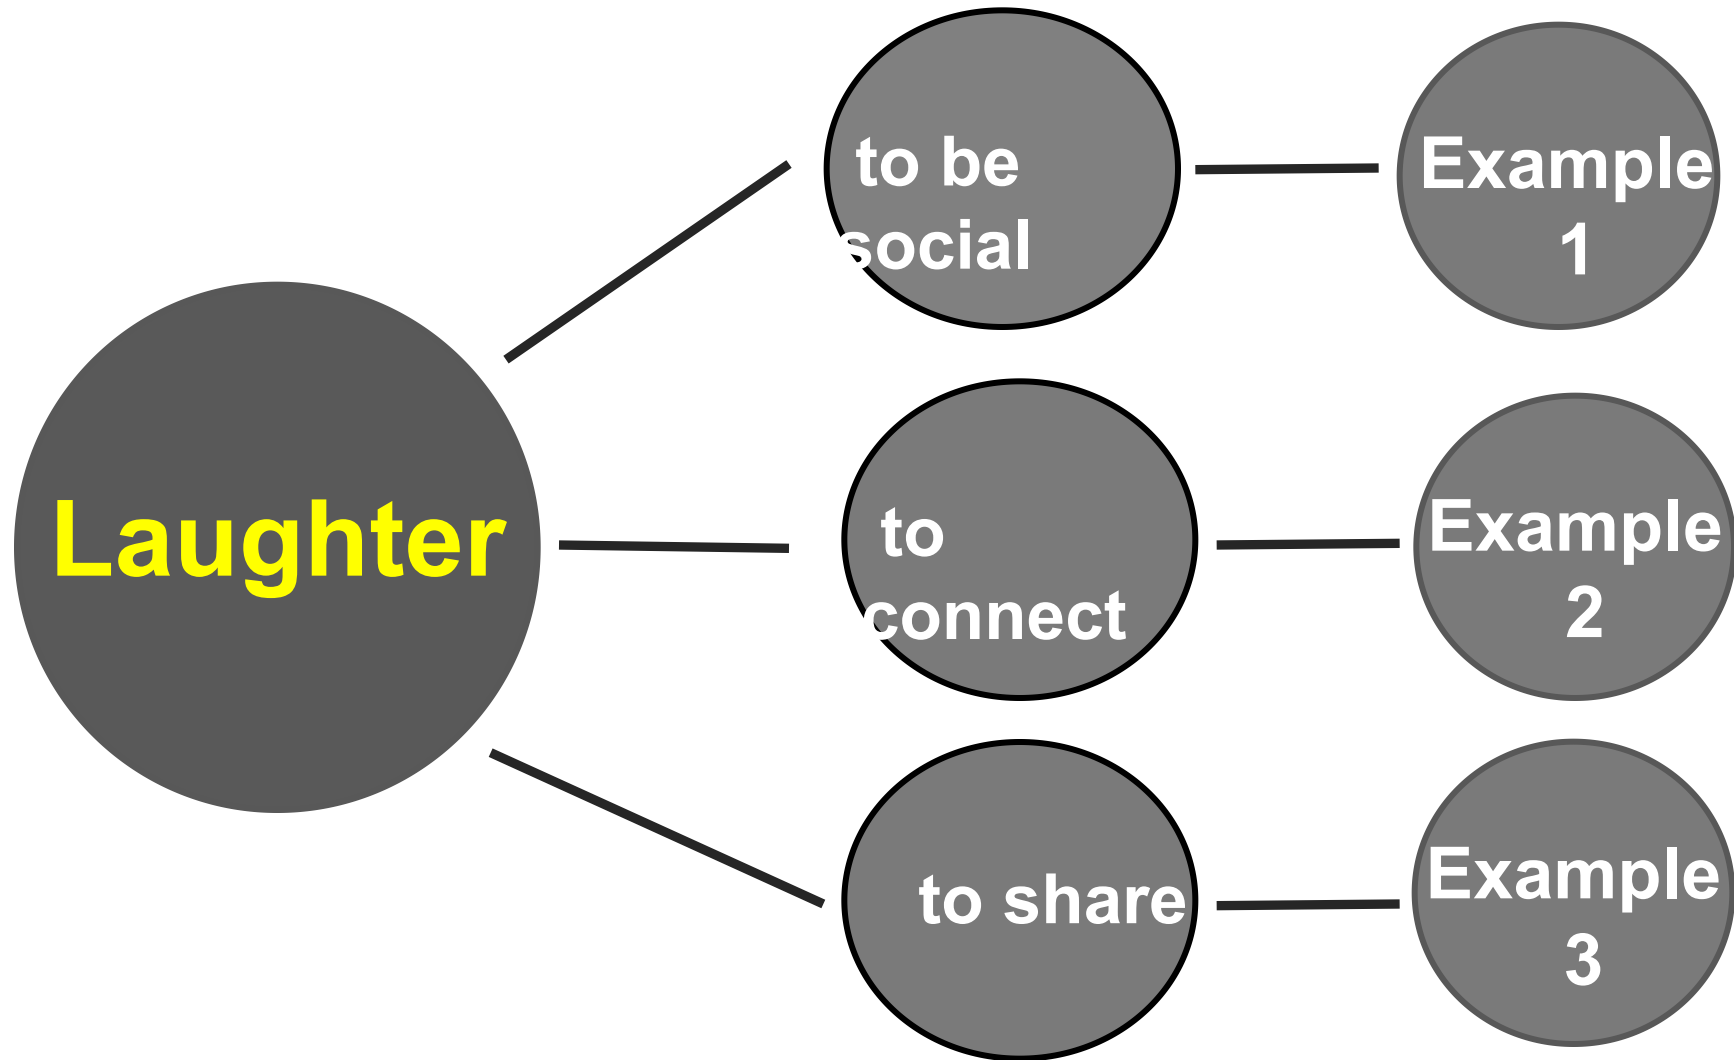

... What was so funny? While people often tell a joke to be funny, research shows people most often laugh at things that aren't so funny. For example, people laugh at simple statements that people use to begin a conversation—for example, “Here comes Hasid.” Questions like “How did you do on your test?” can also cause laughter. This shows people laugh to be social. They want to make a connection with other people. In addition, this is why babies laugh. It's not that they are laughing at a funny face, but they too want to connect. Laughter is one of the first steps we take to be social.

As an example, consider this joke: What did the 0 say to the 8? Can I borrow your belt? Did you laugh out loud? Probably not. We may read something or think something and laugh to ourselves. But laughter, the laugh out loud kind, is usually only done when other people are

The key sentences supported by these examples

The Structure of Para1

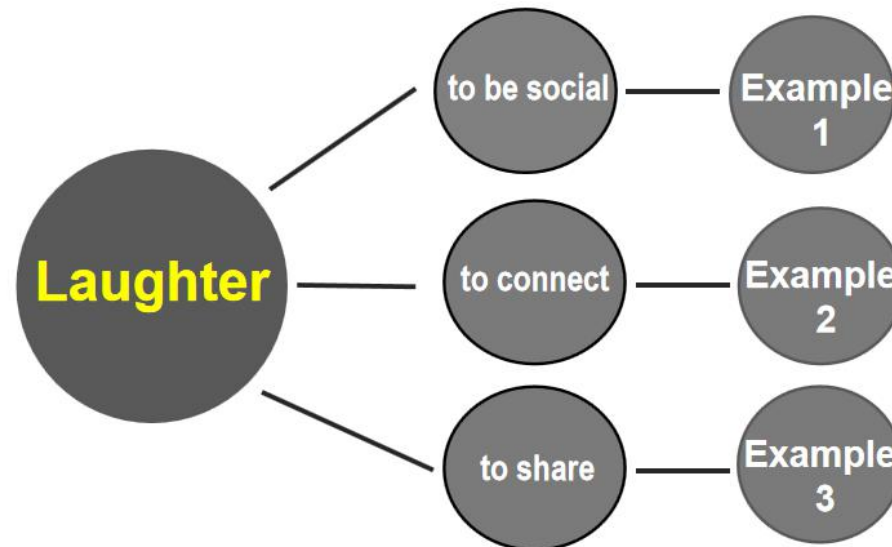

Para.2:

Laughter is not just a way to be social. It can connect or divide social groups. Someone laughs after a pause or after a sentence in a conversation. It's not a word but a way to respond, or say something back, and it communicates something. What does laughter say? "You're funny." "We're listening to you." "I was a reason why one of the most common abbreviations for "la" message, we are not that we think the purpose is different. Laughter they don't belong. part of the group.

Let's draw the structure of Para2!

The Structure of Para1

and is an we send this text communicating someone is someone know of a group or not

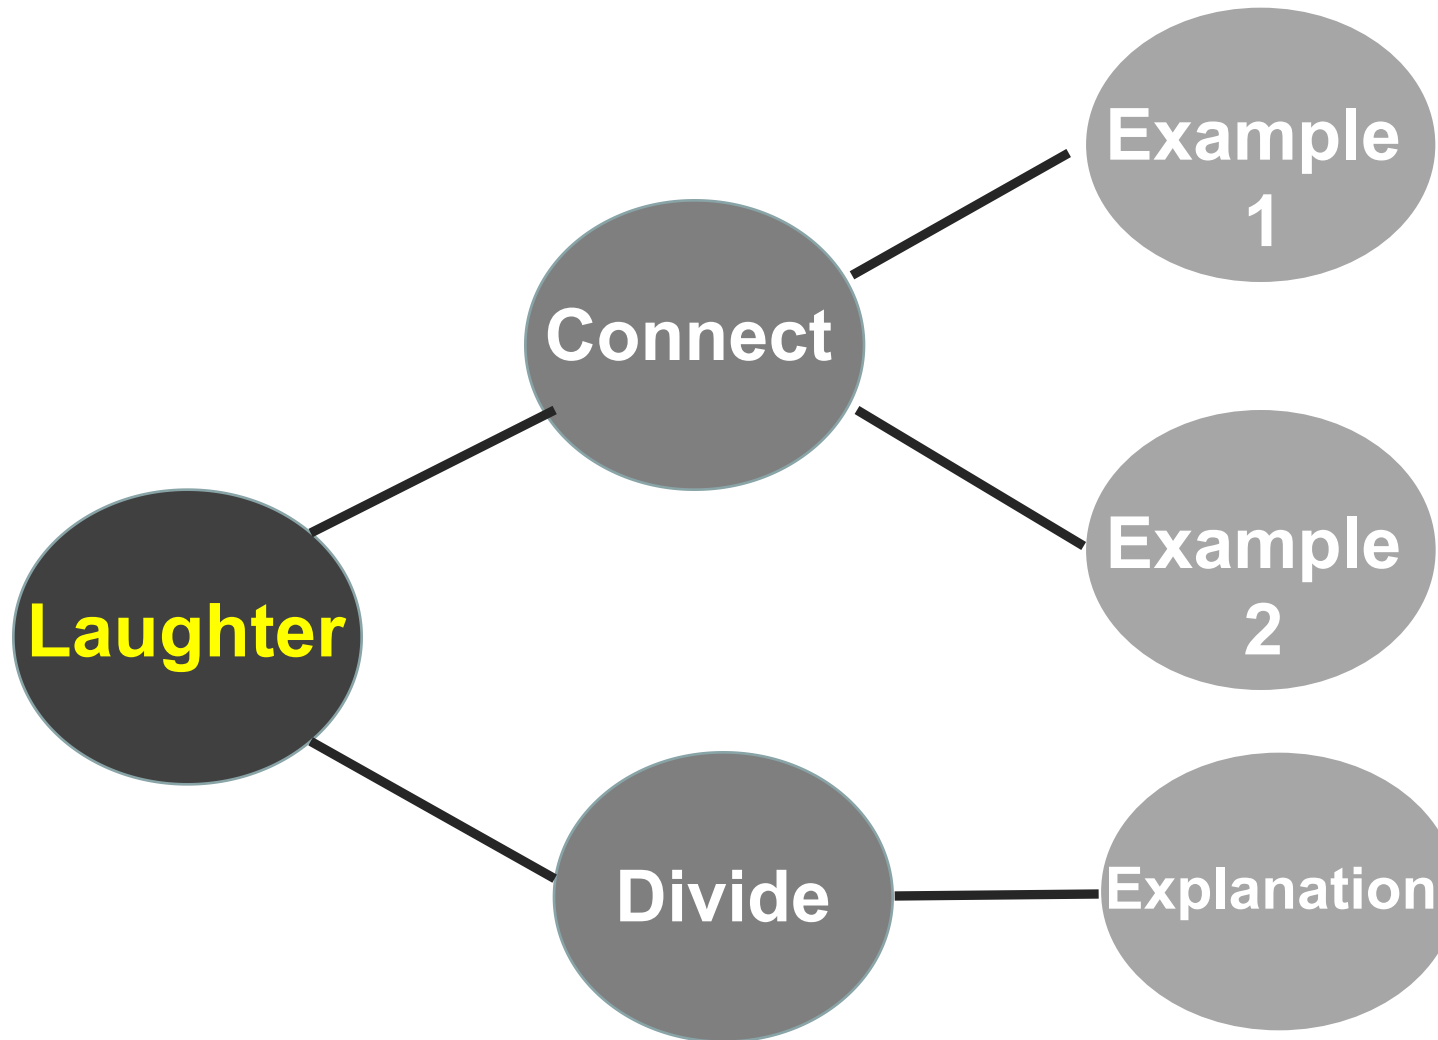

Para.2:

Laughter is not just a way to be social. It can connect or divide social groups. Someone laughs after a pause or after a sentence in a conversation. It's not a word but a way to respond, or say something back, and it communicates something. What does laughter say? “You're funny.” “We share the same sense of humor.” “I like you.” “I'm listening to you.” “I want to hear more.” “I'm interested in you.” There is a reason why one of the most used text messages that people send is an abbreviation for “laugh out loud”: LOL. Of course, when we send this text message, we are not actually laughing out loud. We are communicating that we think the person is funny. However, laughing at someone is different. Laughter can be not nice. People use it to let someone know they don't belong. Laughter can make people feel part of a group or not part of the group.

Para.2:

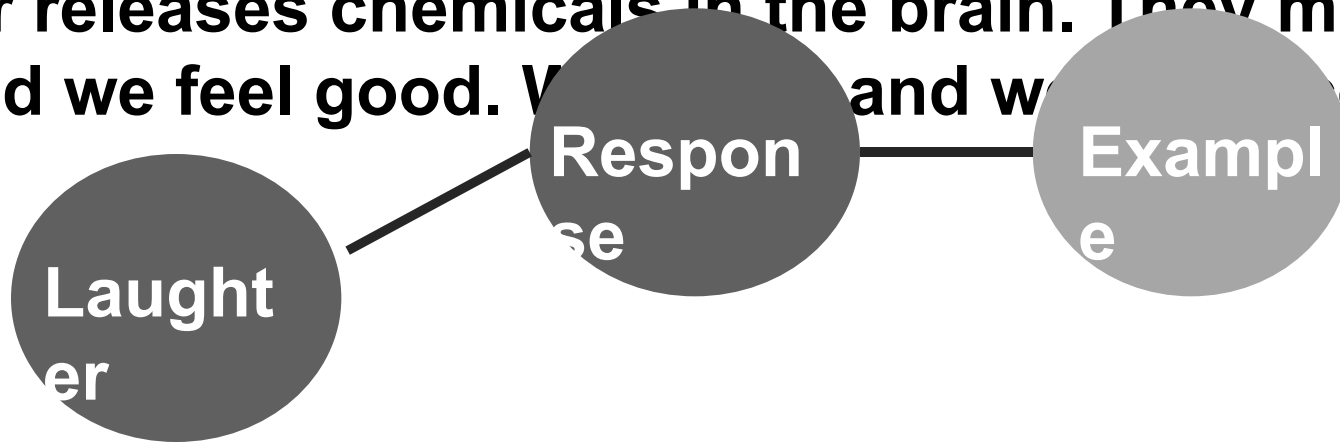

Laughter is not just a way to be social. It can connect or divide social groups. Someone laughs after a pause or after a sentence in a conversation. It's not a word but a way to respond, or say something back, and it communicates something. What does laughter say? "You're funny." "We share the same sense of humor." "I like you." "I'm listening to you." "I want to hear more." "I'm interested in you." There is a reason why one of the most used text messages that people send is an abbreviation for "laugh out loud": LOL. Of course, when we send this text message, we are not actually laughing out loud. We are communicating that we think the person is funny. However, explanation is different. Laughter can be not nice. People use it to let someone know they don't belong. Laughter can make people feel part of a group or not part of the group.

The Structure of Para2

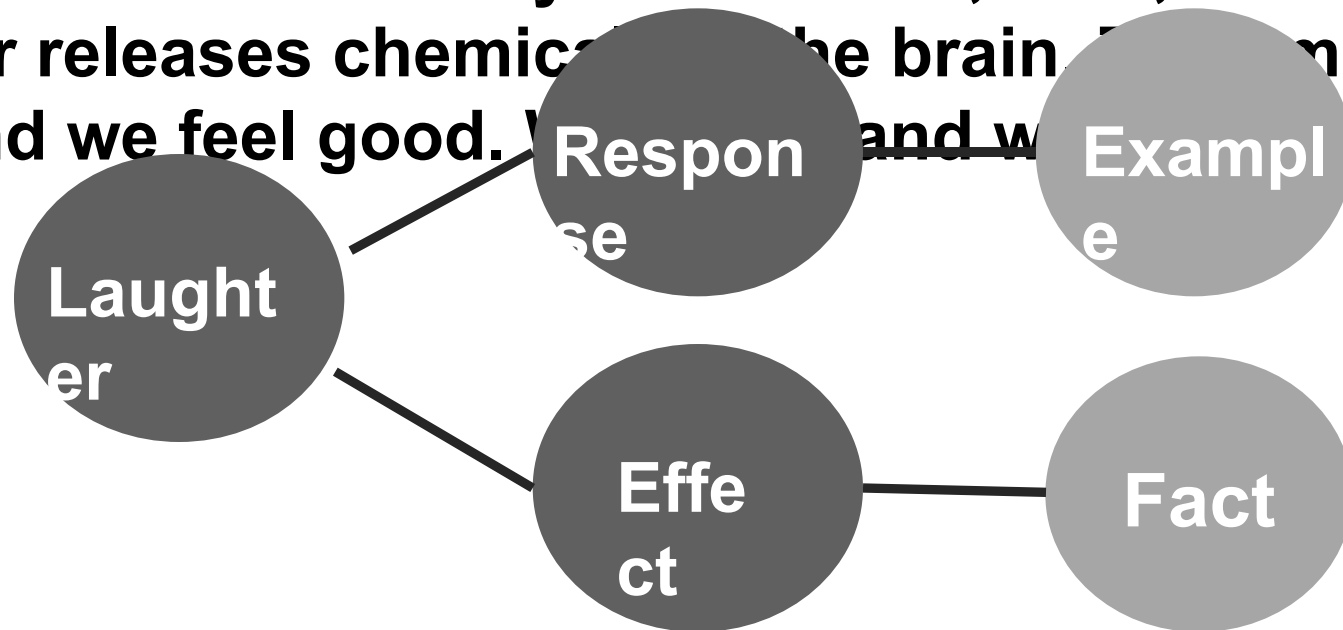

Para.3:

When we hear someone laugh, we laugh too. Laughter is a response that we don't have to think about. It is passed down from person to person. This is why TV shows use laugh tracks. The example shows a recording of an audience laughing. When TV viewers at home hear this, it makes them laugh too. And the laughter has an effect on our body. When we laugh, our face muscles move and our breathing changes. Muscles all over our body in our arms, core, and legs are affected. Laughter releases chemicals in the brain. They make us relax. We laugh and we feel good. We laugh and we have a connection with others.

Para.3:

When we hear someone laugh, we laugh too. Laughter is a response that we don't have to think about. It is passed down from person to person. This is why TV shows use laugh tracks. The show includes a recording of an audience laughing. When TV viewers at home hear this, it makes them laugh too. And the laughter has an effect on our body. When we laugh, our face muscles move and our breath fact changes. Muscles all over our body in our arms, core, and legs are affected. Laughter releases chemicals in the brain to make us relax. We laugh and we feel good. Response and Example connection with others.

Para.4:

3 When we hear someone laugh, we laugh too. Laughter is a response that we don't have to think about. ...

Laughter is a response we don't control. When we hear someone else laugh, we laugh too.

The Structure of the Passage

Why Do We Laugh?

1 When was the last time you laughed? Remember a time when you couldn't stop laughing? Babies first laugh when they are three and a half or four months old. The age people laugh the most is five or six. Maybe you remember a time from this age when you found something so funny? While people often tell a joke to be funny, research shows that most often laugh at something that isn't so funny... This shows people laugh to be social. To make a connection with others. It's not that they are laughing at a funny face, but they too want to connect. Laughter is one of the first steps we take to be social. ... But laughter, the laugh out loud kind, is usually only done when other people are around.

Laughter is not just a reaction to something funny. It can be a way to connect with someone, to share a moment of joy, or to say something back, and it communicates something. When we laugh, we share the same sense of humor. "I like you." "I'm listening to you." "I want to hear more." "I'm interested in you." There is a reason why one of the most used text messages that people send is an abbreviation for "laugh out loud" :LOL. We are sending a message, we are connecting, we are laughing out loud. We are communicating with the person who is funny. Even if we are laughing at someone who is different. Laughter can be not nice. People use it to let someone know they don't belong. Laughter can make people feel part of a group or not part of the group.

Para 1

Para 2

Para 3

Para 4

social connect

share

connect

divide

respons

effect

4 Eg₁ Eg₂ Eg₃ Eg₁ Eg₂ Expla*natio Eg Fact

Let's talk!

Why Do We Laugh?

- People laugh to be social.
 - Laughter can connect or divide social groups.
 - Laughter is a response that we don't control.
 - Sometimes laughter may be a relief.
- ...

Choose an impressive reason and offer your OWN examples to support it.

You may begin your examples with for example, as an example etc.

Laughter is the sun that drives winter from the human face.

——Victor Hugo

Homewor

1 Further thinking

What characteristics do you think an exposition should have?

2 Write a paragraph

Choose an impressive reason and offer your OWN examples to support it.

You may begin your examples with for example, as an example etc.

Homewor

1 Further thinking

As an exposition, do you think it is scientific enough?

2 Write a paragraph

Choose an impressive reason and offer your OWN examples to support it.

You may begin your examples with for example, as an example etc.