One Possible Version:

Dear Tom,

Last Friday, our club organized a Chinese calligraphy exhibition and I'm more than happy to share some relevant details with you.

We began with choosing a theme and then devoted long hours to improving our skills — each member produced draft after draft, striving for perfection in every stroke. Alongside that, we personally put together the display boards and wrote explanatory notes for each piece, so that viewers could truly appreciate the stories and emotions reflected in the works.

When the exhibition finally opened, I felt both nervous and proud. Seeing so many teachers and students admiring our works with genuine curiosity made all the hard work worthwhile. I truly hope you can come to China one day and experience it in person!

Yours,
Li Hua

One Possible Version:

Then one day, I took a deep breath and tried again. With Phil's strong hands supporting my arm, slowly and painfully, I moved my right foot forward and then my left foot. My legs trembled like leaves in the wind. "That's it," Phil said softly. As I inched down the hallway, my fellow residents gathered by their doors. "Go! You can do it!" they cheered. I passed the activities room, then a beautiful landscape picture on the wall, sweat soaking my shirt. When my fingers finally touched the cold wood of my front door, hot tears flooded my eyes. I turned to Phil and whispered, "I made it." He smiled and said, "All you needed was confidence in yourself. And you found it."
