Dear Jeff.

I'm writing to share with you my unique experience on May 1st, <sup>the</sup> Labor Day.

Currently, the consciousness of environmental protection springs all over the city and I teamed up with other fifty friends to launch a tree-planting activity. Bathed in brilliant sunshine, we planted every tree with great caution.

Actually, it was a rare opportunity to experience the joy of hard work, which brought us a fulfilling sense of achievement on May Day!

假如你是李华，你校学生会组织部分同学在社区开展了一次环保活动。请你根据提示给美国朋友Karl写一封电子邮件介绍此次活动：1. 活动时间；2. 活动内容；2. 活动感受。

Dear Karl,

How are you doing? I'm sharing with you one of my special experiences last Saturday.

In response to the call of the Students' Union, some of us students went to a local community to do some clean-up. Divided into several groups, some collected litter, some helped to put the rubbish into the dustbins, and others handed out brochures, appealing to people to contribute to a better environment. Showered with praise from the residents, we know there's still a long way to go before we really enjoy a satisfying environment.

Do you have similar experiences at home?

Yours,
Li Hua

Last Saturday, the Students' Union of our school launched a book fair in a local community. At the book fair, residents, especially some kids, sold their unwanted books, bought books they needed or simply exchanged books with each other. Like other fairs of this kind, prices were typically very low. Personally, I like this activity, which not only benefits the environment, but also gives us an excellent chance to feel the real world.
