第一节 应用文写作

参考范文:

Dear Mike,

Learning that recently you're bothered by the addiction to purchasing with Ant Credit Pay and a heavy financial burden in repayment, I'm writing to offer some suggestions.

Honestly, I totally disapprove of overspending. Not only does it drive us to buy unnecessary things, but also distracts our attention from study, which should be your present focus. If I were you, I would budget reasonably and devote myself to study.

I sincerely hope you can take my suggestions into careful consideration. Best wishes!

Yours,

Li Hua

第二节 读后续写

参考范文:

Paragraph 1:

Kelly rushed down to the sidewalk but couldn't reach her crying daughter. Then an idea struck her. She hurried upstairs and knocked on the door of the neighbor on the second floor, with Isabelle following closely behind. Hearing what had happened, the neighbor let them in and joined the rescue. From the window opened next to the awning they were able to reach out and carefully pull the crying girl inside. Kelly held Anne in her arms tightly and examined if she was hurt. She was pretty shocked to find that Anne only had a bruise on her right arm.

Paragraph 2:

"She's the luckiest kid in the world," said the neighbor. She had miraculously survived a five-story fall and landed on an awning outside the building. No broken bones, no other serious injuries. Kelly and Isabelle were both glad that the little girl was alive and alright. They extended sincere gratitude to the neighbor and hurriedly sent Anne to hospital for a further examination. After that, Kelly called the landlord for safety bars to prevent the tragedy from occurring again.

Text 1

M: I've just ordered a new computer. It's twice the speed of the one we've got now and much better for games.

W: Really? I can't wait to see it.

Text 2

W: I'm so glad it's Friday. Are you going to help us at the Pet Day event tomorrow?

M: I'd love to, but I'm not sure how I could help. I don't know much about animals.

W: You don't need to. We're just trying to find good homes for the animals.

Text 3

W: A lot of staff haven't come in today, John. Where are they all?

M: Oh, some of them just called me. They got stuck on the road because of the football match at the Central Stadium.

Text 4

W: I'll never take my car downtown again.

M: What's the matter, Jane? Did you get another parking ticket, or you didn't find a parking space?

W: I wish I were just that. My car broke down.

Text 5

W: Hey, you looked concerned. What's on your mind?

M: Final exams. I'm not fully prepared yet.

W: Well, don't worry too much. You still have three days.

Text 6

W: What are you wearing to the art exhibition? I understand it's going to be a rather high-class affair.

M: My blue jeans with a white shirt, tie, and a sport coat.

W: Do you think jeans would be appropriate for the occasion?

M: Why not? If those designers of men's clothes can wear them at fashion shows and on TV, I'm sure I'll fit right in. It's not like I'm going to attend somebody's wedding.

Text 7

W: Dad, when will you finish your cooking?

M: Several minutes.

W: So what should I do now?

M: Pass me a bowl for the soup.

W: Where's the bowl gone?

M: Look for it yourself, please! Kind of busy here, Zoe!

W: Dad?

M: Check the drawer.

W: OK, got it, but its shape is so strange. I don't like it.

M: Can it hold soup?

W: Maybe.

M: It smells sweet. Your mom and May are gonna love it. Get them for dinner, Zoe!

Text 8

W: Are you running in the Boston Marathon this year?

M: No way. My running days are over.

W: Are you serious? You used to participate every year.

M: Yeah, that was before my car accident. Now, there's no way I could handle a marathon. I couldn't even run 2 miles.

W: But I thought your car accident wasn't serious...

M: It wasn't. But it did cause some pain in my leg. It's not bad, but it gets worse when I run.

W: That's terrible. Have you considered getting a running coach? Maybe you need to be taught how to run in a way that doesn't make your injury worse.

M: I hadn't thought of that.

W: My roommate is a physical education teacher. She might know someone who can help.

M: If you could help me to contact her, I'd sure appreciate it.

W: No problem. I mean, running has been so important to you. I'd hate to see you give it up.

Text 9

W: Bob, you can't imagine who I met the other day? Old Tom. He looked sad. Did he get his pension at last?

M: Yes. They made him retire after 50 years at sea. He is pretty sad about it, but what can you do?

W: He is all alone, isn't he?

M: Yes, his wife's been dead for years. They had only one daughter, Ruth. But she went off to town after she left school. And he hasn't heard from her since. I hear she is making much money as a model.

W: Maybe someone could get in touch with her. She has the responsibility to look after her father.

M: I don't think she would. She never got on with her father. Old Tom is a bit of a tough character and his daughter is selfish. Oh, I hope old Tom will get through. He is healthy at least. He comes to the hospital for a check regularly. My partner Doctor Johnson is his doctor.

W: That bad-tempered man?

M: Oh, he isn't really bad-tempered. He just looks so.

W: Ladies and gentlemen, it is my great pleasure to present the first meeting of the Woodville Lunch for senior citizens. We all hope that this will be a great success and that there will be more to come. I am extremely pleased that so many of you are able to be here today and I give a warm welcome to you all. I would like to say a particularly warm welcome to Joan Miller, who is ninety-four years old today. I'm sure that you will all join me in wishing Joan a very happy birthday.

The aim of the club is, of course, not only to provide food, but also mainly to provide companionship although it is extremely important that people of all ages eat nutritious food, and I can tell you now that it is delicious! I have already tasted it. However, the club exists not only to provide food and I'm sure that many of you would like to stay on after the lunch things have been cleared away so that you can have a chat. Today, we're not in a hurry so that you can get to know each other. Indeed, I hope that will be the case because that will show that you are all enjoying yourselves and that is the main point of this club. Have fun!
