China's ecommerce giants, JD and Alibaba, are competing for rural market, as the growing rural Internet population boosts online sales. However, lacking necessary infrastructure and logistic support, rural China market develops slowly. To handle that problem, relevant measures are taken respectively to promote service and sales. Still, there remains much to be done, considering the low income and the time needed to generalize online shopping in rural areas. (70 words)

英语听力原文

Text 1

W: What did you order? It looks delicious. I should have gotten that instead of steak.

M: It's spaghetti with a meat and vegetable sauce. The sauce here is so good. They use fresh vegetables and good quality meat. This dish is my favorite!

Text 2

M: Thanks for studying with me yesterday. I was so worried about the French test. But I got a really good grade!

W: Congratulations! I don't know my grade yet. I'm so nervous! I hope I did well too.

Text 3

M: How did you do in your race today, Teresa? Did everything go well?

w: I was leading the entire way until the last loop around the track. Then two people passed me.

M: That's not bad at all. Good for you!

Text 4

M: What was that sound? Is someone outside the house?

w: I don't know. It woke me up, too! It's six o'clock in the morning! I have to get up for work soon.

M: Look out of the window – it's an animal getting into the trash!

Text 5

W: Would you like a piece of cake ? I just had it delivered to our office from the cake shop.

rM: Thanks! But I'm still pretty full from lunch. My department had a big meal in the Italian restaurant downstairs.

Text 6

M: Did you see the news on TV this weekend? There was a disaster in a town near here! With many stormy days, a dam broke and the whole town flooded. Thankfully all the people either escaped over the bridge out of town or were rescued. Everyone in the town survived.

W: I heard about that from my friend! Her family lives in that town. He said the people are all okay, but their houses were ruined from the water.

M: Oh, no. That's so sad. At least they're all okay. We should go over there and see if anyone needs our help!

Text 7

M: French class is so difficult. I thought it was supposed to be similar to English.

W: Only because some words are the same. The grammar is different, though.

M: For me, I just need to practice what I have learned. I study all day, but I don't get a chance to practice it.

W: I'm lucky, because I can speak with my French cousins. That's why I chose to study French in the first place.

M: Do you think you could help me?

W: Of course. Come over on Wednesday nights. I watch a French movie with my family and we have French meals.

M: Cool! It will be just like taking a trip to France!

Text 8

W: I'm giving my speech on global warming on Monday. Could you give me some advice?

M: Sure. What's it about?

W: Everyone has to choose a different aspect of global warming-like rising sea levels, storms, or extreme heat. Mine is about how ocean plant life is dying because the ocean is getting too hot.

M: So what's the problem?

W: Well, I've done a lot of research, so answering questions isn't the problem. I'm happy with my speech, too. But how to begin the speech isn't easy for me.

M: That's completely normal.

W: I looked online for speech tips, but none of them are helpful.

M: You should give the speech to your family and friends as much as possible.

W: So...you'd like to hear it?

M: of course! You know what they say, "Practice makes perfect."

Text 9

W: This weather must be quite a change from what you're used to, Kyle.

M: Oh, yes. I haven't ever seen any snow back in Manila. This is awesome!

W: You should see the snow in Toronto. It gets a lot deeper there than here in Vancouver.

M: Really? My father has to clear the road in front of our house today. Then we will use all the snow to make a snowman. It is almost five inches deep!

W: I heard on the weather forecast we will have another two inches by the end of the week.

M: It is so beautiful. When it started snowing last night, I sat by my window for at least an hour watching it. It was so exciting!

W: I agree. My parents say the roads can get really dangerous, though.

M: Oh, I never thought of that.

W: Personally, I hate it when we lose electricity. Sometimes it lasts for hours.

M: Do you think they will cancel school tomorrow?

W: We'll have to wait and see.

Text 10

My younger brother had always been angry that I had a cell phone and he didn't. At least, that's what I thought. You see, he was two years younger than me. Since we were little kids, Daniel always wanted to play with me. When I turned 17, my father gave me a new phone. I spent a lot of time on that phone. Daniel stopped asking me to do things with him. I didn't miss him much, because I was busy. When I turned 19, I was in college. I got an electronic card from Daniel for my birthday. The message said, "Put your phone down and look at what's around you!" So I decided to turn my phone off for a day. It was hard! I missed the updates from my friends. I missed playing games. At the same time, I realized that I missed my brother even more. The next morning I called Daniel and invited him to visit me. Since then, we've become closer than ever. I still use my phone, but my brother is more important.
