My Opinion on Material Rewards for Senior Three Students

As a senior three student, I fully support the heartwarming initiative to provide snacks and stationery as rewards to motivate students

They are both functional and meaningful. Pens and notebooks are essential for daily review, while snacks ease hunger and refresh us after long study hours. More importantly, they carry profound spiritual value, serving as a warm reminder that our efforts are seen and recognized, motivating us to push forward.

I sincerely hope this sweet initiative can be implemented, keeping our passion for learning alive.

第二节

Inside his pocket, the bone whistle pressed against his hand. Torn between his stubborn pride and deadly danger, Toby stared at the worn whistle in his freezing hand, wrestling fiercely with his conflicting thoughts. Faced with the biting cold and endless swirling snow, he came to realize that clinging to pointless pride was never true bravery. Shivering violently, he lifted the whistle to his cracked lips and blew hard. Sharp, clear notes of the whistle cut through the howling wind. He kept blowing at regular intervals, hoping the sound could travel far over the snow.

The sound of the whistle drew anxious Grandpa and Jax over. Toby's heart leaped with relief as they finally found him behind the pine tree. Grandpa wrapped a thick blanket around his trembling body and rubbed his cold arms. Jax explained how they followed the whistle here. Ashamed, Toby admitted that it had almost cost him his life just to prove his bravery, thanking them for rescuing him. On their way home, the whistle hanging around his neck, Toby thought to himself: True courage is knowing when you need help and daring to ask for it.

M: Sorry, Kelly. I'm late. I was on the phone for an hour.

W: Who were you talking to Steven?

M: Sam, an old friend from college.

Text 2

W: I hope you like the book I lent you. I wasn't sure if you'd be interested

M: I had the same doubt at first, but once I started, I simply couldn't put it down

Text 3

W: Do you remember when we were kids?

M: Yes, you always took my toys and laughed at me

W: Well, I really shouldn't have brought this up.

Text 4

M: Hurry up with your food, Sally. They say there's a hurricane coming. We'd better get home before that.

W: Okay, I'm done. Let's get back to the car. Could you carry these shopping bags?

Text 5

M: Don't worry, it's just 3:20. We still have a little time

W: I am afraid that your watch is 20 minutes slow. The film will begin in 10 minutes.

Text 6

M: I'm thinking about getting a motorcycle W: Are you crazy? Drop the idea

M: I'll be careful and I can take you for a ride on my motorcycle

W: Nice try, but I'm not going to say yes anytime soon.

M: Why, what's the problem? I've saved enough money

W: But I would be worried all the time

M: Well, I'll come up with a better reason next time.

Text 7

W: Hey! I heard Mona's authentic works are on display at DEJI Art Museum. Did you get a chance to go?

M: I went last weekend with some of our classmates. Absolutely mind blowing

W: Oh yeah, tell me everything.

M: I mean, I'm no art expert, but seeing them in person was wild. It is nothing like seeing them in a textbook. The colors and details were just unreal. There is so much going on, but so little clear detail. You can totally tell how much hard work went into them.

W: Wow! Now I really want to go

M: And you know what? It wasn't crowded, so the whole experience was superb

W: Amazing! Why not recommend it in our art class?

Text 8

W: Stan, do you have a minute?

M: Oh hi, Cathy! Sure, what's up?

W: It's so noisy here that I can't work. We're supposed to work on our project for the Rock Music Festival in our office, but have you noticed? Jack constantly has clients coming in and out.

M: I see what you mean. Someone has to speak to him about it

W: We really can't ask him to stop having clients come in, can we?

M: No, of course not. But you are not able to do your work, and neither am I. I imagine it's the same for the colleagues in the office.

W: Hmm... Could we arrange a meeting room for him? You know, there's a room down the hall

M: You mean that little storage room? Oh, that would be too small.

W: Anyway, let's go over and check it out first

Text 9

M: What do you think of my new sweater, Tracy?

W: Well, it looks good on you, but you don't seem to wear this style very often

M: I know. I tried on about 20. Actually, this one isn't really what I wanted.

W: Why did you buy it then?

M: The salesman sold it to me before I realized what had happened. He just never stopped talking, and he told me some stories about the latest fashion and special discounts. Before I could say anything, he'd wrapped it up and taken my money

W: Well, it doesn't look too bad.

M: But I went out to get a blue sweater with a V-neck and short sleeves, and I came home with a brown one with a high neck and long sleeves.

W: You must be easily taken in. You've got to learn to stand up to these high-pressure salesmen. They'll sell you all sorts of things you don't want if you don't watch out.

M: Next time I'll send my wife in. She won't fall for their fancy words easily.

The 2026 World Cup ball Trionda has three colors representing the host countries: U.S., Mexico, and Canada It is made in Shenzhen, China. You might think the ball is just an ordinary football, right. It's actually special, packed with high-tech features you'd never expect. First, it has a smart sensor that records the ball's movement data in real time, so faster decisions can be made. And even the tiniest offside or handball won't escape notice. It requires 90 minutes of charging before each use to power its smart functions. Second, designers created a new surface that maintains stability at high speeds. Even when kicked with great force, the ball follows a smooth, accurate path. This isn't just a football. It's a perfect example of how technology transforms the game.
