皖南八校2027届高三10月教学质量检测英语听力录音稿

Text 1

W: Excuse me, are you Mr. Smith from London?

M: Yes, that's right.

W: I'm Helen from Green Company. How was your flight? I'm here to pick you up. The car is waiting outside.

Text 2

W: Are you ready to order, sir?

M: Hmm, I'm not sure. What would you suggest? This is my first time here.

W: The beef noodles are our most popular dish. I'm sure you'll like it.

Text 3

W: John, have you heard the weather report? Heavy rain is expected this afternoon.

M: Really? I'm going cycling with my roommates by the lake.

W: Why not try the gym instead? It's just as good.

Text 4

W: How do you find this apartment? It's within walking distance of the subway.

M: The location is perfect. but the rent is more than I can afford.

W: I can bring it down by 50 dollars if you sign a one-year contract.

Text 5

W: Luke, it's almost eight. Aren't you going home?

M: I have to finish this plan tonight. My team needs it tomorrow morning.

W: Don't overwork yourself. Remember to eat something.

Text 6

M: Hi, Anna. I heard you worked at a big company downtown before. What made you choose this small office?

W: The salary was higher there, but I always had to work late. Here. I finish at five and have plenty of time for my family.

M: So you came mainly for the work-life balance?

W: Actually, no. I first came for a six-month training program. I enjoyed the atmosphere so much that I stayed when they offered me a permanent position.

Text 7

W: Hello, Sunshine Restaurant. How may I help you?

M: Hi, I'd like to book a table for dinner this Friday evening.

W: Certainly. Could you tell me how many people will attend and what your budget is per person?

M: There will be 12 of us, and we're looking at 50 dollars each.

W: Got it. Is this for a special occasion?

M: Yes, we just finished a big project. The whole team wants to celebrate.

W: That's wonderful news. What time would you like to come?

M: Around quarter to seven, please.

W: Fine. Would you like us to have some wine ready for your group?

M: That would be perfect. By the way, do you provide high chairs? We'll have a young child with us.

W: Yes, of course. I'll note that down.

Text 8

W: Welcome back to the program. Today we're talking about a young creator who's been making waves online --- Alex, who takes pictures for fashion magazines and uses AI tools to help with his editing work.

M: Right, I read about him last week. Before, Alex would spend whole afternoons adjusting lighting and colors by himself. Now he just describes the mood he wants, and the AI finishes all the technical work in minutes.

W: The speed is truly impressive, no question. But here's what worries me --- when everyone uses the same AI tool, won't all the photos start to look the same? The personal vision each artist brings is really what makes photography an art. isn't it?

M: That's exactly what many of our listeners have been writing in about. We've got more than 50 emails on this topic alone. We'll share some of your opinions right after this next song.

Text 9

M: Dr. Carter, your new book is about fast food in Ancient Rome. That sounds surprising. Can you tell us more?

W: Well, most people think fast food is a modern invention, but actually, ancient Romans had street food stands everywhere. In fact, many common foods we enjoy today --- like bread, cheese, and even early forms of hamburgers --- were sold on the streets of Pompeii nearly 2, 000 years ago.

M: Why did it take so long for scholars to recognize this?

W: These shops were first uncovered in the 1860s, but researchers back then believed they were just ordinary homes. In the 1930s, Italian archaeologist Professor Rossi suggested they were actually food shops. But his idea wasn't widely accepted until the 1950s, when British historian Dr. Wilson, in his further study, found cooking pots and food remains inside, proving Rossi had been right all along.

W: Before we set off on today's nature walk, let me go over a few ground rules to keep everyone safe. First, proper footwear is required at all times. No open shoes or sandals, as the path can be rocky and slippery. Second, you must stay with your assigned group for the whole trip. Never wander off alone --- this is a wooded area and it's easy to lose your way. If you do fall behind, stay where you are and blow the whistle we provided. Also, remember the rule: take only pictures, leave only footprints. Do not pick plants or drop any litter. We will be out for about two hours. If you return to the parking area early, don't go looking for others. Instead, check in and wait on the school bus. Alright, let's have a wonderful time and enjoy nature!
